4 Per Cent and Sobriety Are We Turning Chinese? Mr. McAdoo, He Flies About Tax Exemption

—By Arthur Brisbane—

DR. HENDERSON, professor of applied physiology at Yale, ought to know something about the human body, and he says, "four per cent beer is not intoxicating" His definition of intoxicating is "a beverage which consumed in the ordinary way would not induce a temporary disturbance of physical conditions and behavior."

Doctors have said that a child can absorb in a day, harmlessly, as much as two ounces of alcohol. If that be true, that child in a day could drink more than three quarts of four per cent beer, without injury.

But, all that is theory. He who drinks now must drink bootleg whiskey or "needled" beer, into which bad alcohol has been pumped with a hypodermic needle.

The extremely able Manchester Guardian, Great Britain's most solemn and substantial newspaper, worries about us. The editor thinks our gangsters are of the same breed as Chinese bandits, and "our civilization is failing."

Let us hope that the Manchester Guardian is too gloomy. Our gangsters shoot each other. Chinese bandits don't do that.

Chinese bandits kidnap women, cut off a finger, or an ear, and send it back, with a request for cash. Our gangsters have not adopted that method.

The Chinese bandit is a product of chaos in government. Our gangsters and our several billion dollars a year bootleg crime system are the products of our noble experiment, prohibition.

The vets say that if we abandoned the noble experiment, we'd also recover from gang rule. The drys say no.

Time will tell.

Kingsford-Smith sets a new flying record, flying from London to Allahabad, India, in 5½ days.

Airplanes may crash, and freighters break in two, but fliers are not discouraged. The history of man has been one of unconquerable effort. That's why he rules the earth, and all earth's inhabitants, except the silkworm.

Mr. McAdoo, who dug tunnels under the North river, where others had failed, thus connecting Manhattan island with the United States continent, turns now to the higher realms of transportation.

He is on his way, by air, from Los Angeles to New York, determined to learn "how fast an average business man can fly from the Pacific to the Atlantic."

New York wants $330,000 a year taxes from the Chrysler tower, built on land belonging to the Benevolent Cooper Union, and supposed to be free of taxation.

At the same time, a taxpayer could compel the Knights of Columbus to pay taxes on their hotel in New York, which contains stores, a barber shop, etc.

The reply is made that at least one big Masonic building, with stores, is also tax exempt.

Judges, carefully selected, will decide these points. Meanwhile, the little man wishes that somebody would free from taxation the house in which, by the sweat of his brow and the worry of his soul, he feeds and raises his children.

Suppose the Founder of Christianity returned and was asked: "Would You free from taxation the humble dwelling of a poor man and woman with five or six children or would You free a fine building, costing millions, erected in Your honor?"

What do you think He would answer?

The chief officials of the New York Stock Exchange, it appears, dined with President Hoover at the White House on Sunday, and answered some questions.

The President is supposed to have told the Stock Exchange officials that he thinks short conspiracies to lower values and increase apprehension by short selling will be told them all he thinks, they heard a good deal.

You are "almost persuaded now to believe" that the old law of supply and demand is not so powerful when you are not afraid of it.

Ordinary talk about interfering with short sales, or any form of conspiracy to diminish or injure prices in Wall Street, would be silenced with, "Supply and demand regulates that."

But after President Hoover has a talk with Stock Exchange leaders, supply and demand suddenly ceased to take the form of poisonous attacks on stock values, at least for one day.

If wise, the Exchange will modify the activities of racke-

BOOTLEGS IN U. S. BUILDING, SAYS CROOKER

Civic League Leader Makes His Charge in a Phone Talk to Washington

The charge that two bootleggers are operating in the building housing the headquarters of the Rev. Jonathan S. Lewis, Federal prohibition administrator for New England, was made today.

Conrad W. Crooker, general counsel for the Liberal Civic League, made the charge in a telephone conversation with Edward Y. Jones, assistant director of the prohibition bureau at Washington.

"I suggested we send at least the right to speak to federal officials up his own building," said Crooker, in reference to his telephone conversation, which followed a [illegible] charging the inactivity of Mrs. Lewis.

MISS PARKER QUIZZED

He said he called attention to the fact that with the exception of the administration of George A. Parkers, the entire record of federal prohibition bureau has been under constant criticism for 10 years past.

He added that an avalanche of complaints against Mr. Lewis and his associates had been received by the Liberal Civic League.

"I told Mr. Jones," he said, "that if he doubted the justification of these complaints, I would like to have his department assign a special investigator to compare the activity of the Federal bureau here with that of the Boston police department in the enforcement of prohibition since Mr. L. is was appointed.

DOING BIG BUSINESS

"I also told Mr. Jones that only yesterday I received information that two well-known bootleggers are carrying on a flourishing business in the same building where Mr. Lewis' bureau is located."

Atty Crooker said he also stated that Lewis should be called "on the carpet" and made to explain his apparent indifference to existing conditions.

He said he was assured by Jones that the telegram and information would be brought to the attention of Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, prohibition director, at the earliest moment. Col. Woodcock is at present in the Middle West.

BIG PAGE-SHAW BROKERS' FEES ARE REVEALED

Former Official Says They Got $961,000 for the Sale of $2,000,000 Stock

The division between the company and the brokers of the $2,000,000 obtained from the sale of Page & Shaw stock was described today in Superior Court at East Cambridge by George Peterson of Fellsway, Malden, government witness against 13 men on trial for conspiracy in connection with the stock sale.

Peterson, who was behind the scenes as vice-president of the candy company, said the company got $1,038,000 and the brokers $961,000. He said Isaac Hart and Joseph Dunham, who are among the defendants, got $500,000.

In spite of the high-sounding title he signed with the concern whose business extended to all parts of the country, Peterson said his salary was only $3000.

ONE CLAIM SETTLED.

In told of a complaint of a law firm for Lydia Wade, a client, who demanded a refund of $30,000 paid for Class A stock. It was first ignored by President Dunham, he testified, because "Dunham didn't have time to see them."

Later, he said, after a personal visit of his to the law firm, the sum of $20,000 was refunded by Page & Shaw and Hart and Pollay gave the candy company $15,000 as their share.

They were given credit for the $5,000 and also for the $10,000 difference between the claim and the amount paid.

When he protested to Dunham, Peterson said, Dunham replied: "Let it ride. They have legal and other expenses."

"DOUBLE" FOR HART

Before Peterson appeared as a witness, there was a dramatic moment in the courtroom when Isaac Hart, counsel produced a "double" for Hart from among the spectators, in an effort to force Herbert L. Gordon, who was testifying, to throw doubt on his own story.

Jordan, a resident of Lynn, who bought Hart's share of the Page & Shaw stock, had stated that Hart visited him and urged him to pur-

At Golden Trial

MRS. ELIZABETH POWERS, of Dedham, one of the instigators of the Boston American's expose of Mrs. Rena Golden's "baby farm" in Dedham, who was a witness at the latter's trial today.

MRS. GOLDEN, DENOUNCED BY JUDGE, SWOONS

Deaths Avertible, Says Sanborn in Imposing Six Months; She Appeals

A six months' jail sentence, another of the same length suspended and a year's probation were imposed upon Mrs. Rena Golden, "baby farm" proprietor of Westwood and Dedham, by Judge Clifford Sanborn in Dedham court today.

Mrs. Golden mumbled an appeal and collapsed.

Her husband, her 13-year-old daughter and Miss Roberta Jolly, state investigator who haled Mrs. Golden into court, assisted her to an anteroom where she was revived.

Returning to court, her bail was set at $1000.

Her arrest followed investigation by state child welfare authorities revealed exclusively in the Boston Evening American.

Judge Sanborn, during a bench conference and just before imposing sentence described the care as one that "warranted severe penalty with no extenuating circumstances entering into it."

DEATHS AVERTIBLE

"A case of this sort should draw as heavy a jail sentence as the law permits," Judge Sanborn said.

"I haven't seen anything that would warrant leniency. She knew she was violating the law by keeping these babies without authority.

"The deaths of some of the children, in my opinion, could have been averted if Mrs. Golden had reported to the child welfare department so that proper investigation of conditions could have been made."

Mrs. Golden was the only witness called. She told of a visit to the Golden house Oct. 3 and said she found eight babies there, six of them in a sun parlor where all the shades were drawn and windows shut.

None of the six could make an audible cry, she said.

DENIED HER IDENTITY.

She told of meeting Mrs. Golden and said that Mrs. Golden denied her identity, saying she was her sister.

She testified that five babies, entrusted to Mrs. Golden's care, had died.

Judge Sanborn interrupted at this point to state that the sentences would have been more severe if manslaughter charges had been brought.

Mrs. Golden was arraigned on a

SCHOONER RACE IS POSTPONED

Gloucester, Oct. 16 (AP)—The second race of the international series for the championship of the North Atlantic fishing fleets was again postponed today when Capt. Angus Walters, skipper of the Bluenose, found he could not have repairs on the Canadian champion completed in time to sail a race that could be completed before dark.

It was expected the new race with Joe Gaetano L. Tarbox at last schooner out of Gloucester, will be sailed tomorrow. A strong wind continued to blow out of the northeast and the barometer indicated it might continue tomorrow.

Capt Walters had hoped that the fore topsail trees which were fractured in yesterday's storm should secure half of the 275-mile ocean course might be replaced in time for a race today.

The old trestle trees, which had been exposed to the rigors of the North Atlantic fishing banks for nearly 10 years were found to be badly decayed. The wood was so rotted that it could be chipped away with the fingers.

Curley Wants Hoover to Help Jobless

Mayor Curley will suggest a permanent federal planning board on unemployment to President Hoover at a conference at the White House next Thursday, he announced today at the third of a series of luncheons at the Parker House, at which college presidents and economists are discussing the problem.

The mayor's visit to Washington will be to confer with the President over adding Governor's Island in Boston harbor to the airport and filling in the space between, a job which the mayor estimated will employ 500 men.

The island has been promised the city by the War Department, but delays have arisen in the completion of the transfer.

WANT STATES TO HELP.

Those at today's luncheon went on record as favoring a request to the Governors of all the states to organize planning boards to co-operate with the proposed federal board.

Another motion was passed, calling on Governor Allen to call together the Bay State mayors and selectmen, to develop a program of relief. These motions were both passed on suggestion of Prof. Carroll W. Doten of M. I. T.

Miss Sara Landau, head of the economics department at Wheaton College, speaking for herself and associates, endorsed the mayor's federal board plan and suggested consideration of "unemployment insurance or employment assurance."

ASKS OTHERS TO JOIN

She urged asking cities and towns in the state to determine what public works might be started at once, and recommended that the president of the Boston Federal Reserve bank and other leaders be invited to join the present conference.

"A federal planning board would give men and women who have made a success of life a chance to be of genuine service to the American people," said Mayor Curley.

He also told of delays necessitated by the law in launching public improvements such as the East Boston traffic tunnel, contracts for work on which cannot be awarded until mid-December.

William H. Taylor of the Boston public welfare department, and Miss Elisabeth Herlihy, secretary of the city planning board, were other speakers.

San Francisco Honors Hearst as Publisher

San Francisco, Oct. 16 (INS)—San Francisco opened its gates today in a tremendous home-coming celebration for William Randolph Hearst, who began his publishing career here 66 years ago.

The congratulatory reception, inspired by the publisher's recent expression of faith in San Francisco's future, was made to explain the apparent indifference to existing conditions.

He said he was assured by Jones that the telegram and information would be brought to the attention of Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, prohibition director, at the earliest moment. Col. Woodcock is at present in the Middle West.

Following a colorful procession from the Southern Pacific Railroad station to City Hall, Mr. Hearst was officially greeted by Mayor James Rolph, Jr., and other civic leaders.

After welcoming ceremonies at the City Hall, a luncheon, with Mr. Hearst as the guest of honor and principal speaker, was held at the St. Francis Hotel by the Down Town Association. Particularly to commemorate the 50th anniversary of Mr. Hearst's connection with the San Francisco Examiner, first newspaper of the Hearst group.

Mr. Hearst as the principal speaker, reviewed the history of the Examiner since he took over ownership.

San Francisco's reception actually began at San Jose, 50 miles south of here, where the publisher was met on his train by a committee headed by Supervisor Andrew J. Gallagher.

WITNESS SAYS BROKERS GOT $961,000 IN PAGE & SHAW STOCK DEAL

chase more. He said Hart gave the name of Goldman.

Under rigid cross-examination, Atty. Edward Tierney representing Hart, Jordan admitted the name might be Golden. Tierney then called Bernard Golden to stand up, and when the spectator stood and stepped forward the resemblance proved to be striking.

"I never met that man," said Jordan, indicating Golden.

"Well, will you swear to it?" asked Atty. Tierney.

"No, I guess I won't," replied the witness.

PETERSON SWORN IN

Peterson had to be sworn in when he was called as a witness, as he was not among the 14 witnesses who took oath as government witnesses at the start of the trial.

Peterson said he was employed for Page & Shaw for two years, leaving in June, 1929, at a time when several branch stores had been closed.

"Later I was called back by Dunham," he said, referring to Otis Emerson Dunham the president of the concern, who is one of the defendants. "Dunham told me of the plan for a new stock issue and he wanted me back to help in this.

"I went back to work in August and was made a vice-president at $3000 a year. I was given authority to sign stock certificates and took care of the money sent in by Hart and Pollay from the subscribers.

"Dunham told me Hart and Pollay were to get 50 per cent on all sales, except single shares. I kept a record of the money. There was $2,000,000 taken in. Page & Shaw got $1,023,174 and Hart and Pollay received $961,825.

400,000 SHARES FOR DUNHAM

"Holland (a former vice president who is also on trial) came into the business in August and was introduced to me by Dunham. Early in September, Dunham went away for three weeks and told me Holland was in charge.

"In the latter part of 1929, Dunham told me to have a certificate for 400,000 shares of Class A stock made out in his name. I did this and heard no more about the matter.

"I spoke to Dunham and to Joseph and Philip Pollay about complaints from subscribers and Dunham told me to take Father Levesque's letters to Pollay, who he said was taking care of that."

Father Levesque is a Catholic priest of Marlboro who is said by the government to have been one of the heavy losers in the Page & Shaw "bubble." Dist. Atty. Bushnell asked that these letters be produced and was told by the witness that Dunham's attorney had them.

TELLS OF BIG PROFITS.

Morris Goodman of Roxbury, a certified public accountant, testified that Dunham told him the company was very profitable until litigation with the government arose necessitating his absence over long periods. The witness did not say what the litigation was.

Goodman said Dunham also told him of a proposed merger with Loft's (another candy company) and of a large offer from a New York banking firm for the Page & Shaw good will. Dunham said the company had earned or paid 20 or 25 per cent a year for 10 years, according to the witness.

Bernard J. Littlefield of Providence, deputy bank commissioner of Rhode Island, took the stand and produced a document which he said was filed with the signatures of Henry Shaw as treasurer and Raymond Holland as vice-president, relating to stock issues. A photostatic copy of it was made an exhibit in the case by the district attorney.

Millions Back Crime Under Dry Law, Codman Charges

"Corrupt police" and the "Building of an immense crime organization to sinister power" were described today as the effect of prohibition by Julian Codman, general counsel for the Constitutional Liberty League in debate with Prof. T. N. Carver, Harvard economist, before the Women's Republican Club.

Codman took the affirmative on the question of repeal of the Baby Volstead act.

"Rum-running and bootlegging in this State is governed by the law of supply and demand," he said. "The only effect of the act is to corrupt police, State and local."

"The police, as a whole, are all right, but there is always a minority who will protect the liquor racket.

"The worst thing prohibition has done is the building up of an immense crime organization, financed with millions of dollars, which has given the criminal class a sinister power that they have never had before in the history of the world.

"White slave, narcotic and gambling rackets are all financed by the liquor racket and leaves the future of our country in serious menace and doubt."

Prof. Carver said:

"Police corruption today is not to be compared with that of the corrupt politicians and the saloon before prohibition.

"The only effect of repeal would be to make it easier for bootleggers to get more liquor. Every drop of liquor in Massachusetts would still be bootleg."

"If the baby Volstead act were repealed, there would be no law against the landing of liquor on our shores and transporting it from Canada and manufacturing it in stills."

charge of operating a boarding house for babies under two years without authority and failing to notify state officials of her boarding of babies under the age of two years. She got the straight sentence on the first charge and the suspended sentence and probation on the second.

After Miss Jolly's testimony, Attorney Harry J. Seligman, counsel for Mrs. Golden, said he would submit a finding of guilty. State Detective Michael Fleming, who handled the case, was ready to testify, but was not called, in view of the admission.

LOWER BAIL REFUSED

Others waiting to testify were Thelma Cosman of Wellesley Hills, Pauline Sullivan of East Boston and Phyllis Bedel of Dedham, mothers of the babies at the "farm."

Rose Antonuccio of Scituate, another mother, whose baby was identified through a photograph in the Boston Evening American, failed to appear.

Before Mrs. Golden was taken to Dedham jail in default of bail, counsel made a plea for a reduction of the bonds to $500. This was refused by Judge Sanborn, who said he wouldn't reduce the bail in this case under any consideration."

Mrs. Golden's daughter, Rita, 13, clung to her mother as the trip to the jail started.

Mrs. Elizabeth Powers of Dedham, with whom seven of the babies were left by Mrs. Golden, also appeared but was not called to testify.

GERMAN 'REDS' START RIOT IN REICHSTAG

Cry "Down With Hunger Dictator" as Bruening Outlines Fiscal Policy

Berlin, Oct. 16 (AP)—Riotous scenes began in the German Reichstag after its opening this afternoon as Chancellor Bruening outlined the government program for relief of the business depression.

He was greeted with cries of: "Down with the hunger dictator!"

President Loebe had to threaten several of them by name with suspension before order was obtained.

The chancellor began with a reference to the economic depression throughout the world, which he said struck Germany especially hard.

"To overcome this crisis," he said, "the Government has received a far-reaching economic and financial plan which will be submitted presently in the form of a bill. To carry out this plan of salvage the Government will fight with all parliamentary means. It is essential that the emergency decrees promulgated in July under Article 48 shall not be abrogated."

Emphasizing that Germany's foreign policy would sacrifice aid not one of adventure, Chancellor Bruening nevertheless said:

"What has most deeply wounded our people and particularly our German youth, is that, after the first severe disillusionment over the non-fulfilment of the 14 points of President Wilson, not even the Versailles treaty is being fulfilled by the other side in those of its provisions favorable to us.

"The word that was pledged us; that the compulsory disarmament of Germany would be followed by the voluntary disarament of the others has so far not been brought near realization."

He charged that many of the nations were continuing to increase their armaments, calmly ignoring treaties and endangering the security and peace of the world.

teers on the short side and avoid unpleasant federal regulations.

In the old days in China, superfluous girl babies thrown into the water were not interesting. There were so many of them.

In our day racketeers and others "put on the spot" have become part of routine news.

But there is some interest in the improved methods of killing.

According to the police, men disappear, detectives know that they have been taken for a ride, but their bodies are no longer found thrown out on the road.

The improved method kills the man, takes him to deep water and throws him in, heavily weighted down with iron wired to his body.

Dead men, thus disposed of, tell no tales.

The "riots in Boston," with "Red Communists," so called, insisting on sharing the deliberations of the American Federation of Labor, were not serious.

It is interesting to note that "Red" ladies were more violent and active than the men.

One or two of the ladies, it is said, bit and scratched policemen and refused to "act like a lady" when urged to do so by policemen. One even asked, "What do you know about a lady?"

LABOR SET FOR BEER-WINE BATTLE

Modification Report Is Said to Ask for Drink as a Relief for Unemployed

The long-awaited prohibition report understood to contain a recommendation for a modification of the Volstead act, was to be made to the convention of the American Federation of Labor at Hotel Bradford late today.

The report, which is expected to cause a heated controversy, is believed to concur with the recommendation of the executive council asking for the manufacture of 2.75 per cent beer and light wine as unemployment relief.

Delegates who have presented resolutions calling for the repeal of the 18th Amendment and the Volstead Act, were ready to fight against the adoption of a modification report.

It is believed that the controversy would go over to tomorrow's session, and that the recommendation of the executive council would be successful in the end.

Additional legislation providing for further restriction of immigration as an unemployment relief measure, was unanimously urged at the convention.

The report of the resolutions committee deplored the failure of Congress to place Mexico under the quota law, and declared that at times like the present there should be almost complete exclusion.

Another resolution was adopted demanding that immediate steps be taken to stop border-crossing privileges for the purpose of employment, on the ground that each country should take care of its own workers.

WANT HOOVER TO HELP

The convention concurred in a report calling for the endorsement of the executive council's stand on selective immigration as relating to new industries for which no labor is available in this country.

Supplementing its suggestion for the appointment of a national unemployment relief committee, the convention adopted a resolution requesting President Hoover to create a long-range planning committee of public works to avert future unemployment.

President William Green and other labor leaders were instructed to call upon the President to urge formation of such a committee.

Frank X. Martel of the Typographical Union suggested registration of aliens might serve as a check against immigration violations. Prompt opposition was forthcoming from Andrew Furuseth of the International Seamen's Union, who said registration had failed to bar Chinese.

The jury recommended that Allan Golub, Pittsburgh, be held for the Grand Jury on a manslaughter charge. Grace testified Golub's car struck his and then overturned, crashing Balsam.

Testimony that a bottle of liquor was found in Grace's car after the accident was offered by Patrolman C. D. Nichols, who added that the bottle had not been opened.

Former Irene Castle, Thrown by Horse, Injured

Chicago, Oct. 16 (AP)—The Fall hunting season of the exclusive North Shore area will be without one of its scintillant figures—for some time, at least.

Mrs. Frederic McLaughlin, the former Irene Castle, is at home today with a broken collarbone. The once famous dancer, who is widely known for her efforts for the humane treatment of dogs, suffered the injury Tuesday. Her horse, Oakridge, a hunter, stepped into a hole approaching a jump, threw her, then rolled over.

FOUR OF BOSTON'S NATIONAL BANKS NAMED IN BIG MERGER PLAN

FIRST, SECOND MERCHANTS, ROCKLAND

Officials Admit Hearing Reports, but Cannot Give Out Confirmation

Rumors were persistent today that the Second National Bank, the Merchants National Bank and the National Rockland Bank are soon to be merged. A similar report has been in circulation in New York banking circles for some days.

Although officials of the banks denied knowledge of any merger, others prominent in financial circles admitted that there appeared to be foundation for the report.

Elisha Walker, chairman of Trans-America of New York, has a representative on the National Rockland Bank directors.

ROCKLAND NEW ENTRY.

The First National is reported to have recently offered to merge with the Rockland. A merger of the Merchants National and Second National is said to have been under consideration for some time. Linking of the Rockland is a recent development.

The fact that the Merchants Bank has never filled the vacancy caused by the death of Cashier Fred C. Waite, coupled with the Second National's recent occupancy of palatial new quarters in its new building at Franklin and Devonshire sts., have given weight to the merger rumors.

It was pointed out today that soon after the First National went into its elaborate quarters opposite the old postoffice site on Milk st. it merged with the International and later with the Old Colony Trust Co.

NOTHING DEFINITE, AS YET.

Frederic W. Rugg, president of the National Rockland, said today:

"A number of of the board of directors told me a few days ago that he heard some such merger report in New York, but we know nothing about it."

Thomas Prince Beal, president of the Second National, said:

"All news to us. Never heard anything of such a plan."

W. F. Burdett, managing cashier of the Merchants National, said:

"We know nothing of such a merger."

The idea of making such a film is both sound and color originated with Representative Sol Bloom of New York.

Broadway Show Girls Who Figured in Four Gotham Gang Shooting Probes

DOREE LESLIE is another Broadway showgirl whose name has figured in the shooting of "Legs" Diamond. When Marion Roberts first came to New York and was engaged in a musical comedy she met Doree. Subsequently at a night club the racketeer was introduced to Miss Roberts by Doree.

ANNA MARGARET URBAS was the sweetheart of Eugene Moran, murdered bodyguard of the late Arnold Rothstein. Her body was found bound with wire in the Harlem river last June. Police said she was killed because she talked too much.

DOLORES FARRIS, dance sweetheart of the late Frank Marlow, Broadway racketeer, grew up on the New York stage. She was playing in the London production of "The New Moon" when he was killed. She collapsed and retired from the cast.

INEZ NORTON, the sweetheart of Arnold Rothstein, murdered gambling czar, was born in Jacksonville, Fla., 27 years ago and arrived on Broadway when she was 20. The gambler made her one of the chief beneficiaries of his $10,000,000 estate.

EARHART WIDOW GETS ESTATE

The entire estate of Edwin S. Earhart, father of Amelia Earhart, Boston settlement worker and first woman to fly the Atlantic, was left to his widow, Mrs. Helen N. Earhart, in his will filed at Los Angeles today.

Earhart died September 23, shortly after Amelia had flown from New York to his bedside. No estimate of the estate was made.

While the will did not leave any share to his flying daughter, the father's views on her income were expressed in an interview a year previous after she had achieved fame through the Atlantic crossing.

"She is wealthy in her own right, so there is nothing to prevent her buying two or three planes if she wants to," the father said, speaking with a mixed feeling of pride and apprehension for her safety when her hitherto unknown exploits in the air were made known to him.

DIAMOND'S GIRL FEARS FOR LIFE

New York, Oct. 16—Three of four men who visited Jack ("Legs") Diamond 36 hours before he was shot in a midtown hotel, were sought by police today.

The wounded gangster's condition was so improved that surgeons said they were preparing him for an operation to remove the four bullets fired into his body in his room in the Monticello hotel Sunday forenoon.

Another setback was given the police pursuit of the gunmen when John Ginsberg, the Monticello manager, arrested as a material witness in the felony, obtained bail last night and departed. Oliver Jail, Marion Strasmick, of Roxbury, Mass., known also as Marion Roberts, the dancing sweetheart of the racketeer, was offered bail but refused to accept it.

The offer was made her after Arthur Sleigenheimer, alias "Dutch Schultz," was called to Dist.-Atty. Crain's office for identification and examination. In the presence of Miss Strasmick, Sleigenheimer was questioned concerning the mysterious death of Anna Urbas, whose weighted body was dragged out of the Harlem river several months ago.

Washington, Oct. 16 (AP)—The Evening Star said today that the Navy Department believes the fire which has disabled the battleship Colorado since June may have been deliberate, and investigators in the guise of seamen have been aboard her in an effort to find the guilty parties.

Naval intelligence investigators, its account said, had found the fire resulted from a short circuit of electric cables "into which ordinary phonograph needles had been thrust."

Heavy Rains Sweeping Here From the West

Another downpour, moving east from the Middle West, threatens to reach Boston tomorrow, bringing with it a sharp drop in temperature.

Heavy rain that centered in Oklahoma yesterday had moved to Chicago and the Great Lakes region today, according to the weather bureau, and was headed directly for all sections of New England.

In its wake a high pressure area was observed, with clear weather and freezing temperatures.

In Montana snow was falling today and temperatures as low as 6 above zero were recorded at Calgary, Alberta.

Heavy Snowfall and Near Zero in West

Denver, Col., Oct. 16 (AP)—Snow, ranging in depth from a trace to seven inches, was general in the Northern Rocky and Cascade Mountain regions today.

One end of the hose is said to have been connected to the brewery of the State General Co., which has a permit to manufacture near-beer.

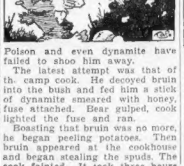
Cook at Camp Faints When "Blown-up" Bruin Goes Into Action Again

Blacksmith Rapids, Ont., Oct. 16—A bear which apparently has more lives than a cat is bothering a construction camp here.



Poison and even dynamite have failed to shoo him away.

The latest attempt was that of the camp cook. He decoyed bruin into the bush and fed him a stick of dynamite smeared with honey, fuse attached. Bear gulped, cook lighted the fuse and ran.

Boasting that bruin was no more, he began peeling potatoes. Then bruin appeared at the cookhouse and began stealing the spuds. The cook fainted. It took three hours to revive him.

FLYNN FAMILY BATTLE OVER ESTATE

Fortune Supposed to Have Been Left by Dempsey Manager Is Missing

Providence, Oct. 16—The spirit of the late Leo P. Flynn, who was manager of Jack Dempsey in that famous, but futile, comeback effort after Gene Tunney took the heavyweight crown, returned from beyond the grave today to figure in a sensational court action brought against Flynn's widow by his brother, Hubert J. Flynn of this city.

Filing application today for a receiver for the estate of his brother, Hubert Flynn obtained a temporary restraining order from Judge Alexander Churchill in Superior court forbidding Mrs. Kate Flynn from removing any of the assets from Rhode Island pending a hearing next Wednesday.

The brother alleges that Mrs. Flynn, who lives in Providence, reported that her husband left no estate.

Hubert Flynn then tells of "two handfuls of unset diamonds" and "$250,000 in $1000 bills," which he says his brother had placed in a safe deposit box in New York about two years before he died.

He declares that his brother must have left at least $250,000 and, among other things, two automobiles, one costing $18,000 and the other $20,000.

Hubert Flynn claims a partner's share of this alleged fortune, asserting that his brother and he were partners for 20 years and that Leo Flynn's sudden death prevented a final accounting.

Dempsey and other prize ring luminaries of the past may be called as witnesses, attorneys for Hubert Flynn said.

Leo Flynn, who had been reputed to have amassed wealth through his association with boxing in this and Boston and later in New York, died on May 19 last of pneumonia. He was 51 years.

He had been successively boxer, second, manager, club matchmaker and promoter. Hubert Flynn declares the partnership, beginning in 1910, made little in the first 10 years, but was highly profitable after 1920.

Hoover Denies He Ordered Paintings

Washington, Oct. 16—Denial was made at the White House today that President Hoover had commissioned Heinrich Lauer, German artist, to paint three pictures of the village of Ellerstadt in the Palatinate.

It was said that no negotiations of any kind had been entered into with the painter.

Handled Millions in Property in Court for $415 Bill

Fred Blanchard, handler of millions in Boston real estate and stock deals, was haled into municipal court today by Warren Flynn & Ross, tailors, for non-payment of a $415 bill.

Three suits each, a suit at $22 and pressing services of $3 were on the bill.

Judge Charles Carr heard testimony of Boring & Batton, sealers, that Blanchard did a margin business of $241,000 with them within two months, received profits of $7000 and then refused to cover subsequent losses. The tailoring concern received a court judgement on the bill but could not collect, according to the testimony of the brother.

Blanchard was called into poor debtor's court three previous times, the last time before Judge Francis Good, who ordered him to pay for a bracelet with a radio set he admitted he owned.

His office at 185 Devonshire st. has been the scene of various real estate deals running into six and seven figures.

Records at the courthouse, showing more than 100 suits against him for non-payment of stock and current bills, were presented Judge Carr today, and the court ordered him to pay the tailoring bill on or before December 16.

BOYD IN DOUBT ABOUT FLYING BACK TO U. S.

By CAPT. J. ERROL BOYD AND LIEUT. HARRY P. CONNOR

Who on Saturday landed their plane, the Columbia, at Croydon airport, England, after taking off from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland. Their flight, with an overnight stop at the Scilly Island, was the second transatlantic crossing for the Columbia.

(Copyright, 1930, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. Distributed by Universal Service.)

(Special Cable)

London, Oct. 16.—Our plans at the moment are still indefinite. We have discussed the possibilities of a flight back to the United States, via the Azores, Bermuda and Florida, as being the logical route at this time of the year. On the other hand, the northern route is still within the bounds of possibility.

We realize, however, the great danger and risk of cold, stormy weather if we retrace the route by which we came. Winter is now approaching and there is little chance of the weather developing favorably.

Our trip over was purely experimental. Uppermost in both our minds was the desire to justify the science of aviation, in fact, to sell transoceanic flying definitely to people who heretofore have been skeptical of aviation's possibilities.

DANGER OF ONE MOTOR

Somehow, we feel doubtful about taking the risk of a return flight at this time, not because of any possible mishap to ourselves, but we feel that aviation might suffer and receive a setback similar to the one which lighter-than-air flying has just received in England through the loss of the R-101.

Naturally, we would like to return the way we came, just to remove all doubt regarding the danger of ocean flying. We believe the Columbia quite capable of making the round trip, but it must be remembered there is always a danger with only one motor and the inability to alight on the sea with safety.

BAD WINDS, TOO

We would not hesitate for a minute if we were provided with a multi-motored ship with a seaworthy hull.

It must also be remembered that on the return trip we would have to buck prevailing westerly winds, which at this time of the year blow with gale force. The question, however, will be settled before the end of the week.

At present, we feel more like a little relaxation in London before going back into the serious problems of Atlantic flights from east to west.

As the human side of aviation, George Bernard Shaw has just pulled a crack here about Amy Johnson's marvelous flight to Australia. G. B. S. dismisses her flight summarily as follows:

WHAT SHAW SAID

"The machine was made, which flew to Australia, which took Amy Johnson with it."

With every respect to Mr. Shaw, for once he is talking about something about which he knows nothing. That little girl made a plucky flight. Her physical endurance was a thing to marvel at. G. B. S. is right, however, when he says the machine was made to fly to Australia. Modern engineering is capable of producing a machine that will fly anywhere on this earth under almost any conditions, but of paramount importance is the human factor, which must have a scientific knowledge of navigation together with the technical ability to handle a plane. These faculties can only be acquired after years of experience.

WORKERS DISCOVER QUICK METHOD TO OVERCOME FATIGUE

They Take a Moment to Eat or Drink Something Sweet

Salesmen who cover miles each day, and business folks who go at top speed at their desks and counters, know that mid-afternoon is the zero hour as far as energy is concerned.

Since rest and relaxation are out of the question at this busy time of the day, countless workers have found to their delight that a piece of candy, a cookie, ice cream, or a sweetened drink—even sugar dissolved in water—restores vigor almost immediately.

The reason for this is that the sugar content of these "snacks" supplies the system with quick nourishment without taxing the digestive system. When the body is thus nourished, fatigue is materially lessened.

Recent tests among workers have proved the value of this practice of eating something sweet in mid-afternoon. A well-known physician in Philadelphia often advises business men to drop in at a soda fountain at 4 o'clock and drink a flavored milk shake. Nervous exhaustion is overcome and the evening meal is eaten later with calm enjoyment.

The demand of the system for refined sugar should not be denied. Most foods are more delicious and nourishing with refined sugar. The Sugar Institute.

BRAZIL STARTS DRIVE TO END REVOLUTION

Rio Janeiro, Oct. 16 (INS)—The federal government of Brazil launched today its long-planned campaign to stamp out revolutionary activity in the various states.

Amidst scenes of patriotic fervor and gala festivity, the first reserve battalions called to the colors by President Washington Luis' mobilization order embarked at Central Station for the Minas Geraes sector, where insurrectionist forces seem to have concentrated.

Thousands of other reserves meanwhile were placed in training for 30 days before being sent into action. In another few weeks, it was estimated, the Government will have a formidable army in the field ready to cope with any opposition.

The capital received reports from southern sources that the treasury of the rebels in Minas Geraes was exhausted. A state loan, it was added, was floated by the revolutionary government, but the issue was not covered by the citizens.

Army authorities reported that prisoners captured on the Minas Geraes front were hungry and scantily clad, without shoes or shirts.

PLANE RUNWAY CONSTRUCTION TO START

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

Construction of the new east-west runway at Boston Airport, which will eliminate take-offs over the thickly settled areas of East Boston, is expected to begin in two weeks, according to Albert L. Edson, airport superintendent, and James Walsh park department engineer.

Bids for the work have been advertised for the past week, and early next week the contractor will be awarded. Actual work on the runway will start a week after the final selection.

SOUNDINGS TAKEN

Soundings of the mud-flats recently leased have been taken by Walsh from the state and the exact amount of fill required has been computed. Outside of a small portion which must be resounded, all that remains to be done is the actual filling of the flats.

Complaints raised by residents of the Jeffries Point district of low flying planes, which have been rigidly investigated by the state supervisor of aviation, Robert L. O'Brien, have been found to be justified. Warnings have been issued by O'Brien and Edson.

The new runway, to be completed for flying operations in the early spring, will eliminate all possibilities of a forced landing on East Boston buildings.

AMES FLIES SOON

Frederick Lothrop Ames, president of East Coast Aircraft Corp, who is planning an extended flying vacation to Mexico and the Panama Canal, intends to have a complete motor overhaul before beginning the tour. He will use a Curtiss Robin, powered with a Wright Whirlwind, and expects to be gone a month or more. His wife will accompany him on the trip, taking her turn at the controls.

LOUIS KOSSUTH, PATRIOT AND FRIEND OF AMERICA and liberty the world over, was given a big day when he visited Boston in the fall of 1852. With all the wonderful decorations of the city and the State House during the recent Legion convention it scarcely outdid what is shown here. The patriot was received in the United States with enthusiasm, but Boston's reception outdid that of every other city, according to the records of the times. Kossuth had a "coach and six" for his official journeyings, and the National Lancers, then on Bulfinch st., were his guardsmen.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP)—Embezzlement of approximately $44,000 since last October to protect an investment of $4000 in stocks was admitted today by John R. Morey, 24, bookkeeper of the Charlotte branch of the Union Trust Co, according to Capt. of Detectives Anthony Andrews.

Morey is charged with the specific theft of $3500 in currency. He told police that he transferred the money to his personal account from the bank funds and chacked it out to provide additional margin for his investments when the October crash of the market occurred.

Grand Jury Hits Central Falls Probe

Providence, Oct. 16—The state grand jury, in a message kept secret since October 10 and released today, declared itself dissatisfied with testimony and witnesses in the September probe of corruption charges against Central Falls police and political leaders. 2 Try Death Leaps; 1 Dies, 1 Is Saved

New York, Oct. 16 (AP)—Two more despondent New Yorkers, following two who killed themselves yesterday, attempted suicide today by leaping from high places. BOYD IN DOUBT ABOUT FLYING BACK TO U. S.

By CAPT. J. ERROL BOYD AND LIEUT. HARLEY F. CONNOR
Who on Saturday landed their plane, the Columbia, at Croydon airport, England, after taking off from Harbor Grace, Newfoundland. Their flight, with an overnight stop at the Scilly Island, was the second transatlantic crossing for the Columbia.

(Copyright, 1930, by King Features Syndicate, Inc. Distributed by Universal Service, Inc.)

(Special Cable)

London, Oct. 16—Our plans at the moment are still indefinite. We have discussed the possibilities of a flight back to the United States, via the Azores, Bermuda and Florida, as being the logical route at this time of the year. On the other hand, the northern route is still within the bounds of possibility.

We realize, however, the great danger and risk of cold, stormy weather if we retrace the route by which we came. Winter is now approaching and there is little chance of the weather developing favorably.

Our trip over was purely experimental. Uppermost in both our minds was the desire to justify the science of aviation, in fact, to sell transoceanic flying definitely to people who heretofore have been skeptical of aviation's possibilities.

DANGER OF ONE MOTOR

Somehow, we feel doubtful about taking the risk of a return flight at this time, not because of any possible mishap to ourselves, but we feel that aviation might suffer and receive a setback similar to the one which lighter-than-air flying has just received in England through the loss of the R-101.

Naturally, we would like to return the way we came, just to remove all doubt, regarding the danger of ocean flying. We believe the Columbia quite capable of making the round trip, but it must be remembered there is always a danger with only one motor and the inability to alight on the sea with safety.

RAD WINDS, TOO

We would not hesitate for a minute, if we were provided with a multi-motored ship with a seaworthy hull.

It must also be remembered that on the return trip we would have to buck prevailing westerly winds, which at this time of the year blow with gale force. The question, however, will be settled before the end of the week.

At present, we feel more like a little relaxation in London before going back into the serious problems of Atlantic flights from east to west.

As the human side of aviation, George Bernard Shaw has just pulled a crack here about Amy Johnson's marvelous flight to Australia. G. B. S. dismisses her flight, summarily as follows:

WHAT SHAW SAID

"The machine was made, which flew to Australia, which took Amy Johnson with it."

With every respect to Mr. Shaw, for once he is talking about something about which he knows nothing. That little girl made a plucky flight. Her physical endurance was a thing to marvel at. G. B. S. is right, however, when he says the machine was made to fly to Australia. Modern engineering is capable of producing a machine that will fly anywhere on this earth under almost any conditions, but of paramount importance is the human factor, which must have a scientific knowledge of navigation together with the technical ability to handle a plane. These faculties can only be acquired after years of experience.

WORKERS DISCOVER QUICK METHOD TO OVERCOME FATIGUE

They Take a Moment to Eat or Drink Something Sweet

Salesmen who cover miles each day, and business folks who go at top speed at their desks and counters, know that mid-afternoon is the zero hour as far as energy is concerned.

Since rest and relaxation are out of the question at this busy time of the day, countless workers have found to their delight that a piece of candy, a cookie, ice cream, or a sweetened drink—even sugar dissolved in water—restores vigor almost immediately.

The reason for this is that the sugar content of these "snacks" supplies the system with quick nourishment without taxing the digestive system. When the body is thus nourished, fatigue is materially lessened.

Recent tests among workers have proved the value of this practice of eating something sweet in mid-afternoon. A well-known physician in Philadelphia often advises business men to drop in at a soda fountain at 4 o'clock and drink a flavored milk shake. Nervous exhaustion is overcome and the evening meal is eaten later with calm enjoyment.

The demand of the system for refined sugar should not be denied. Most foods are more delicious and nourishing with refined sugar. The Sugar Institute.

BRAZIL STARTS DRIVE TO END REVOLUTION

Rio Janeiro, Oct. 16 (INS)—The federal government of Brazil launched today its long-planned campaign to stamp out revolutionary activity in the various states.

Amidst scenes of patriotic fervor and gala festivity, the first reserve battalions called to the colors by President Washington Luis' mobilization order embarked at Central Station for the Minas Geraes sector, where insurrectionist forces seem to have concentrated.

Thousands of other reserves meanwhile were placed in training for 30 days before being sent into action. In another few weeks, it was estimated, the Government will have a formidable army in the field ready to cope with any opposition.

The capital received reports from southern sources that the treasury of the rebels in Minas Geraes was exhausted. A state loan, it was added, was floated by the revolutionary government, but the issue was not covered by the citizens.

PLANE RUNWAY CONSTRUCTION TO START

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

Construction of the new east-west runway at Boston Airport, which will eliminate take-offs over the thickly settled areas of East Boston, is expected to begin in two weeks, according to Albert L. Edson, airport superintendent, and James Walsh park department engineer.

Bids for the work have been advertised for the past week, and early next week the contractor will be awarded. Actual work on the runway will start a week after the final selection.

SOUNDINGS TAKEN

Soundings of the mud-flats recently leased have been taken by Walsh from the state and the exact amount of fill required has been computed. Outside of a small portion which must be remanded, all that remains to be done is the actual filling of the flats.

Complaints raised by residents of the Jeffries Point district of low flying planes, which have been rigidly investigated by the state supervisor of aviation, Robert L. O'Brien, have been found to be justified. Warnings have been issued by O'Brien and Edson.

The new runway, to be completed for flying operations in the early spring, will eliminate all possibilities of a forced landing on East Boston buildings.

AMES FLIES SOON

Frederick Lothrop Ames, president of East Coast Aircraft Corp. who is planning an extended flying vacation to Mexico and the Panama Canal, intends to have a complete motor overhaul before beginning the tour. He will use a Curtiss Robin, powered with a Wright Whirlwind, and expects to be gone a month or more. His wife will accompany him on the trip, taking her turn at the controls.

BOARD DELAYS DRY REPORT TO HOOVER

Washington, Oct. 16 (AP)—There will be no report on prohibition from the President's law enforcement commission until well after election.

The task of reaching mutually agreeable conclusions, even now that the reports of investigators have been digested by the members of the commission, has proved so large Chairman Wickersham decided to adjourn after this week until November 5, the day after election.

The task of getting 11 minds together on an opinion on whether prohibition is being enforced and can be enforced then will be resumed.

There are definite conclusions, however, among members who worked on the special committee gathering facts for the prohibition report, and they are prepared to push these.

Meetings of the group were planned for today and tomorrow, but at yesterday's first session of the week it developed only eight members would be able to attend.

CARROLL GIRLS DRESS, FOOL CENSOR

Yards and yards of costume have been added to the Earl Carroll "Sketch Book" wardrobe since the show opened in Boston, it was revealed at City Hall yesterday following a visit of mayor, police commissioner and a municipal court judge to the Shubert Theater.

Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster, Mayor Curley and Police Commissioner Hultman witnessed the show Tuesday night, with the intention of closing it if extra garb ordered by Censor Casey was not in evidence.

Censor Casey informed the mayor he had viewed the show on the opening night, and had ordered certain changes, notably an increase in costume. These changes he declared, had not been made.

When the censor, mayor and commissioner visited the theater, however, they discovered the shapely limbs were decorously shrouded in stockings and many additional yards of clothing had been added.

Mayor Curley announced that although the "Sketch Book" had eluded official action, a stringent new policy of censorship would be adopted.

Failure to comply with the orders of the censor will result in the revocation of theater license, for an indefinite period, from the league. At present, the ordinance calls for revocation during the proposed run of the offending show.

"This will be construed as a severe but drastic action," Mayor Curley said. "It is necessary, however, to prevent flagrant disregard of the rules in the interests of decency."

MAN HUNT TRAIL LOST IN RAIN

Greenfield, Mo., Oct. 16 (AP)—Mrs. Alma Wilson McKinley, 24-year-old oil heiress, whose story of being held nearly 24 hours by an abductor, has stirred this section of the state, today is under the care of a specialist, who says her condition is "not good." Effects of the long exposure sent her temperature to 101 last night. She is an expectant mother.

For a time late yesterday members of a sheriff's posse believed they had the abductor surrounded in a dense woods near Stockton. After sending for additional help they searched in vain for the man, who told Mrs. McKinley he was a former convict and would rather hang than return to prison.

Because of last night's rain the bloodhounds are of no further aid and have been sent home.

Although Mrs. McKinley, in her high school days at Greenfield rated as the greatest woman basketball player in the world, talked freely of her experiences, she refused to confirm a rport she had agreed to pay the kidnaper $10,000 after her release.

"Ladies Football" Is O.K. for Lynn Boys

"Touch" football, or known to a disparaging younger set as "ladies" football, is satisfying enough for junior high school footballers in Lynn.

It seems the school authorities figure the regular game of football is too tough for boys in the junior high school to play, so they have substituted in place of the time-honored tackling the "touch" system.

If a boy is carrying the ball down the field an opposing player has only to touch the opponent and that serves to stop the runner and the ball as effectively as the heroic tackle.

From the teacher, point of view, this "touch" method keeps the fair-haired scholar from being mussed up and his anatomy safe from bruises or fractures, but from the juniors' viewpoint it's just so much near beer.

In other words, the "touch" system has taken out the thrills as well as the spills. Without the tackling the juniors figure they may just as well play ping-pong

Tardieu Is Godfather

Paris, Oct. 16—Premier Andre Tardieu stood godfather yesterday to the 21st child of M. and Mme. Boisse at the baptismal services conducted by the Bishop of Grante of La Mace.

Time was when the Eastern junior high looked forward to a hard tussle with the Western junior high. These interschool contests always had the youngsters on their toes. No senior high player put more into the tackle or interference than these junior high players.

GLORIA TO ASK FOR DIVORCE

Hollywood, Oct. 16 (US)—Gloria Swanson is preparing to file suit for divorce against her husband, the Marquis de la Falaise de la Coudraye.

The complaint probably will be filed within the next few days. As ground for divorce, the noted motion picture star will charge desertion.

That she eventually would seek a divorce has been generally believed by her friends in Hollywood. To them it has seemed almost inevitable since last August, when the marquis returned from the last of his frequent voyages to Europe.

He went to a hotel to live instead of to the Swanson home in Beverly Hills.

Since then the marquis has been seen frequently in the company of Constance Bennett, motion picture actress and daughter of Richard Bennett, stage star.

Mass. Girl Made Happy

MANY times a child has everything to make her happy and still is dissatisfied. This may not be the youngster's fault. Often it is due to a condition easily corrected.

Take the experience of Mrs. E. Schening, 20 Brackenbury Street, Boston, who says: "Nothing seemed to please Emily. She became fretful, feverish, had frequent bilious spells. She was constipated.

"A doctor friend advised California Fig Syrup and I got some. It relieved her trouble promptly; made her bright and happy again. We have used it for several years."

Mothers by thousands praise this pure vegetable product. Children love it. Doctors recommend it to relieve constipation, feverishness, fretfulness, headaches; to open the bowels in colds or children's ailments.

Appetite is increased by the use of California Fig Syrup; breath is sweetened; coated tongue is cleared; digestion and assimilation are aided; weak bowels and stomach are strengthened.

For your protection, the genuine always bears the name California.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's ablest enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative safe and pleasant.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

Thousands take them every night to keep right. Try them. 15c, 30c, 60c.

3 HELD, 1 HURT IN AUTO CRASH

Newburyport, Oct. 16—Three Boston men, one in serious condition at Anna Jacques hospital, Newburyport, were arrested today after an auto crashed through a fence on Dunning hill section of the shore road to Newburyport.

The injured man is John Rosso of Prince st., North End, alleged driver of the car. With Benny Dow of North st., North End, and William B. Onfiglio of Chelsea st., East Boston, he is charged with stealing the car in Newton.

Dow and Onfiglio denied they were riding in the car and told police they were walking along the road when they saw the crash. Their dry clothing, in spite of the pouring rain, caused their arrest. The car had skidded, throwing Rosso to the pavement.

Sun Refuelled as It Rolls Along With No Time to Stop

Chicago, Oct. 16 (AP)—The sun does not roll into its filling station. Its filling station rolls into it.

That was the way Dr. W. D McMillan, professor of astronomy at the University of Chicago, explained to the Northwestern University audience last night the astronomical re-fuelling progress.

The radiant energy from the sun annihilates through space until it is condensed. Then it takes the form of atoms which are attracted back to the sun.

This atom-attraction re-fuels the sun which otherwise would burn up soon—that is in some 15 trillion years.

Woman and Man Slain in Gun Fight

"Science is revolutionizing all forms of manufacture. The manufacturers of LUCKY STRIKE cigarettes have extended me the courtesy of an invitation to their factories. I was not able to accept but have taken the opportunity to read the reports of scientific men as to the achievements in their factories.

"It is clear that in no line has science been more intelligently applied than in the making of cigarettes."

Consistent with its policy of laying the facts before the public, The American Tobacco Company has invited Mr. Clark Howell to review the reports of the distinguished men who have witnessed LUCKY STRIKE'S famous Toasting Process. The statement of Mr. Howell appears on this page.

LUCKY STRIKE—the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so TOASTING removes harmful irritants that cause throat irritation and coughing. No wonder 20,679 physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating! Knowledge Is Called Best Safeguard for Child

By NANCY BREWSTER

In this day of free speech, free press, woman suffrage and occasional censored plays, children should not be expected to grow up in ignorance of social inharmonies all about them.

"And if they read questionable books before their elders have a chance to and interpret the books for the grownups, why get all hot and bothered about it? Knowledge is a child's best safeguard in these times," Dr. Ira Wile, noted pediatrist, told a large audience at Ford Hall yesterday.

SHAPING PERSONALITY

"Focus attention upon the age in which children are living and not on the children," he urged. "Children are no different today than they were 30 years ago except in the things they can do with modern improvements. Girls are no different today than their grandmothers were at their ages, only they have more freedom of expression."

Physical well being has great influence in shaping a child's personality, the speaker brought out. The intellectual factor in shaping personality is not the index nor the essence of the character nor yet as important as the emotional factor, Dr. Wile added.

Group experience provides a powerful force for harmonizing personality traits that make for successful living, he explained, in showing how circumstances govern behavior.

FIRST OF SERIES

A toothache, the loss of a parent, a fight for a principle or a profound emotional experience may definitely alter a personality, just as happy experiences may alter it, Dr. Wile showed, and the change may occur without the knowledge or consent of the person.

Dr. Wile's lecture was the first of a series sponsored by the Judge Baker Foundation and the Massachusetts Civic League, dealing with special problems and interpretations of the behavior of youth. Christian Herter presided.

Bruyere Puts on a Russian Accent

By ANN ARDEN

ALL THE couturiers must be burning the midnight oil this season studying up on Russian. Wherever you look a Russian cap or peasant tunic pops into view. Even Bruyere has succumbed, with results more dashing than any others seen.

BRUYERE HAS a nice sense of the fitness of things. She accepts the fitted, for instance, but never uses it to excess. She uses the same fabrics and furs that other designers are sponsoring, but she manages to give them an additional twist.

IF YOU have already dubbed the Russian influence a passing fad, you will change your mind when you see how subtly the inspiration touches the mode. The coat pictured is a model from Bruyere. It exploits the trend but not obviously. The skirt is full, the waist slightly tapered and belted. Caracul is used profusely as trimming but none the less with a restrained charm.

* * *

THE MATERIAL is black kashmere, which also makes the belt and buckle. Glossy black Russian caracul fur bands the lower edge, and one side of the coat, where it emerges in upstanding collar, which, open, forms revers. Wide flaring cuffs of the fur reach the elbow.

ALTOGETHER ONE of the most fascinating coats of the whole season! Black gloves are worn, stitched in white, pumps and a black felt hat with forehead band of white fur, which also tips and knots a bow of felt on side on brim.

IF ONE type of reptile makes a clever handbag it seems that two will be even better. A new handbag combines alligator and lizard, using the alligator for the top or frame and the lizard for the body of the bag. The difference in the grain of the two materials makes an interesting pattern.

* * *

WHETHER IT is merely long or newly longer, the glove is coming in for at least a slight bit of ornamentation. Novel round buttons are used on some of the shortest gloves. Gauntlet styles add a bit of trimming or seaming to the long cuff, and instead of the seaming or plain stitching that usually adorns the back of the gloves many pairs are wearing interesting appliques and embroidery.

WHITE'S THRIFT BASEMENT

FITZGERALD TO TAKE STUMP FOR TICKET

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Advocating the election of the entire Democratic ticket, former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald next Saturday night will make his first speech since his retirement from the gubernatorial primary contest on account of ill health.

He will speak over station WEEI, using the time allotted to Joseph B. Ely, his primary opponent.

Although his health is improved the ex-mayor has not yet recovered sufficiently to do much campaigning. He expects, however, to make several speeches before the campaign is ended.

ASK FULLER'S AID

In the Republican ranks, continued dissatisfaction over the primary battle has thrown Gov. Allen and the leaders. Former Gov. Nor Alvan T. Fuller, recently returned from Europe, has been asked to take part in the campaign in an effort to bring into line his Independent following, it is understood.

The former governor said he would be ready to take politics within a few days.

Although Fuller denounced Butler as his last January, he is expected to endorse the complete ticket.

At that time, the ex-governor said:

"Mr. Butler, as a manufacturer whose business is dependent upon those special favors granted under the protective tariff, is no more qualified to be in the Senate than is Grundy of Pennsylvania.

"If Butler should be nominated he would be defeated, as he was last time."

WALSH SPEAKS

But when Butler announced his candidacy, Fuller offered only mild criticism, saying Butler had failed to pledge loyal support to President Hoover in his announcement.

Throughout the primary campaign, Butler now to it that this criticism was not repeated.

Senator David I. Walsh, who made his initial appearance in the campaign last night in Newburyport, Amesbury and Haverhill, will speak tonight in his home district —Fitchburg, Clinton, Leominster and Gardner—and will then return to Washington for a few days.

Walsh predicted a Democratic sweep throughout the country because of Republican inefficiency in dealing with unemployment and business depression.

RAPS PROHIBITION

He described Ely as the best candidate the party has nominated for governor in years. He also praised Maurice A. Coolidge, the party's candidate for senator.

Walsh denounced the Eighteenth Amendment, saying it had produced so much corruption the people may well fear for the integrity of their government unless steps are taken soon.

Big business combinations also came in for scorching criticism.

Candidates Ely and Coolidge are also scheduled to appear with Walsh tonight.

CRUSADERS BANQUET

Because of the great demand for tickets to hear former Gov. Al Smith of New York speak in Boston on Oct. 28, it now seems probable that another hall will have to be engaged in addition to the Arena and Mechanics building. The Boston Garden is not available because of the horse show.

Ely and Coolidge were guests last night at the banquet of the Crusaders at the Hotel Bradford. This is a national organization working for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment.

"Men cannot be changed by the stroke of a pen," Ely said.

"There is a constitutional provision for amendment, through a convention of the states, and I propose, if elected governor of Massachusetts, and occasion presents itself, to lead in the creation of such a convention," he declared.

Coolidge said he stands squarely on the party platform for repeal. Pending repeal, he favors a modification to allow states the right to have light wines and beers, he said.

N. Y. Police Arrest 6 'Reds' After Fight

Bible Used as Guide For Prohibition Enforcement

Editor Boston American:

As I read some of our papers and magazines, it seems to me there are many who do not know, or else have forgotten, the Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging; and whosoever is deceived tereby is not wise—Proverbs 20:1.

At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder. —Proverbs 23:32.

Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink and maketh him drunken.—Habakkuk 2:15.

Don't you think it would be well to publish it on the front page of your paper For it is true—every word of it. True in all the world. True in every state of our Union; so should be dealt with by our federal government.

Wets Assailed as Traitors to Nation

Editor Boston American:

Of all the nonsensical reasoning of the wets, the most monumental is likening their efforts to again fasten upon this country the disgrace of legalized booze to the righteous struggle for American independence.

The chief provocation of the revolution—which called for the supreme sacrifice of true patriots —was unjust, burdensome taxation without representation.

The Eighteenth Amendment of our Constitution was passed by ourselves in the regular orderly manner. It passed both branches of Congress by an overwhelming majority, and was ratified by Massachusetts and 45 other states of our union.

For Massachusetts to join this disloyal nullification drive by the liquor interests of a law she helped to pass would brand her as a coward and a traitor. New York has sown the wind, by similar disloyalty, and she is reaping the whirlwind. Does the state crave her fate?

Is it possible that any fifth grade pupil cannot see the absurdity of this wet piffle?

Are such wets willing to admit that they will not abide by our laws?

Their doctrine makes heroes of bootleggers and gangsters who violate the Constitution of our Country, which is the foundation of our government—our guarantee of protection and security.

The liquor traffic for which wets fight, under the slogan of "personal liberty," has enslaved more victims and mercilessly robbed more defenseless wives and innocent children of freedom and happiness than all other evils combined.

Liberty and freedom, why should you suffer such desecration at the hands of an evil that has violated every noble principle for which you stand?

The law of our country and Christian and temperance workers are fighting to make the emancipation complete.

If the wets do not believe in our form of government let them join the reds go to Russia and swear allegiance to a Godless Nation.

Two More Kind Cops Win Woman's Praise

Editor Boston American:

I would like to have Commissioner Hultman know of two more kind "cops" who gave their lunch to my two children at both parades. If I thought it would mean any promotion, I wish I could find out who they are, as they looked out for the children in every way possible. At the Tercentenary parade I stood on winter st. in front of Conrad's doorway. At the Legion parade I was on Tremont, right across from the Tremont Theater. I do hope there is a chance of finding who those two kind men are. If I saw them again I would know them. The one on Tremont was a young fellow, keeping the passageway open from the subway exit. I know if he will read this he will remember the little girl and boy he gave his lunch and coffee and make himself known. The other man on Winter st. was an older man, and I think his number was 856. I'm not sure. I wish to thank them for their kindness, which I will never forget.

Industrial Leader is Chided for "Nonsense"

Editor Boston American:

This from Ben Franklin (not exactly old Ben, but Benjamin A. Franklin, president of Associated Industries of Massachusetts. See current issue of "Industry"):

"It would be better for all concerned, including the public if it were against the law as unfair competition to sell below cost as established by efficient production . . . It would bring greater prosperity."

Could a child old enough to feed itself crowd more nonsense into 33 words?

An Appeal for Support Of Dog Exemption Bill

Editor Boston American:

Will you kindly publish in a conspicuous place in your paper this appeal?

"Will readers of the Boston American who love their dog, help pass the Dog Exemption Bill which received a favorable report and will come up for vote next December in Congress? The committee on the District of Columbia, to whom was referred the bill to prohibit experiments on living dogs in the District of Columbia, reports "that it gave ample opportunity to the proponents and opponents of the bill to express their views and present their arguments, and feels that the testimony of the proponents outweighs that of the opponents and should be accepted. Having considered the testimony of the proponents and opponent's, we report back to the House that the legislation do pass."

Will all friends of the dog help to pass this bill to protect dumb creatures that cannot ask for help? This act will be a great step forward in humane civilization and we hope that our nation may be the first to pass such legislation.

Upon request, petition letters to be signed and literature will be sent to the public. Address Vivisection Investigation League, 68 Lexington ave., New York City.

Rector Hails Sermon To Battle Wasp

Editor Boston American:

Ministers often get stung by "wild cat" investments but it fell to the Rev. H. R. Smith, rector of St. Paul's Church, Malden, to get stung by a wasp as he was proclaiming the glad tidings of the gospel on a recent Sunday. He killed the wasp, much to the ease and comfort of the large congregation present.

Finds Traffic Lights Fail to Solve Problem

Editor Boston American

Prohibition and traffic lights do not do the trick. This is becoming more and more evident. You have said much in your letter column that is true about both of these corrective agents.

I have used the crossing at the junction of Brookfield and Tremont sts. daily. I am very careful to look at the lights giving the signal to cross. I did so, Tuesday, October 14.

I crossed on the right signal but when I got across to the middle of the street the lights changed and left me standing there with autos whizzing past.

What makes me mad is that a cross on the right signal and white have no respect for pedestrians when the law demands that they should have. Traffic lights are on the same box with prohibition. They do not prohibit.

Prohibition Branded Folly and Failure

Editor Boston American:

Your paper has always been fair to present both sides of prohibition. Some of us are beginning to recognize the fact that constitutional prohibition is becoming more than ever a folly as well as a failure. It cannot be enforced and perhaps it cannot be repealed.

Intelligent people can no longer be persuaded to obey every piece of foolish legislation. There is much of it around.

Look for instance at the Jones Law. The severity of punishment under that law will defeat its own purpose. It classifies prohibition violations with manslaughter, embezzlement, white slavery, sedition, etc.

Prohibition is like a gad fly. It is stinging people but not helping them. Let us be reasonable about prohibition

TOPSFIELD HIGH ELOPERS FOUND IN FARMHOUSE

Topsfield, Oct. 16—One week of romance and adventure ended today for Frank Titus of Boxford and Doris Rockwell 16 year-old student of Topsfield high school, missing since October 9.

The couple, it was learned today, have been found by the boy's father at the latter's farm in Warren, N. H., near Nashua, after one search of the farm proved fruitless.

According to the parents, the students have been sweethearts for two years. Their parents believed they had eloped to be married in New Hampshire.

Acting on a "hunch," the elder Titus went to New Hampshire yesterday and found the youthful sweethearts last night in the farmhouse, used only in the summer by the family.

At the Rockwell home, it was said that it was not known whether the couple had been married.

When he left home, young Titus left a note on his brother's cash box, stating that he had borrowed $4 from the box. The student also took a blanket, a comforter and a small amount of food from the house.

PORT OF BOSTON

By CARL MORRISON

A reflection of a possible future policy was given yesterday by the Boston Port Authority during the press conference.

The board secretary read a letter from the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce in which it urged the port authority to adopt a plan like the one in Philadelphia.

Asked what is the outstanding problem before the board the letter of reply to Philadelphia stressed this point:

"The greatest handicap in that the port facilities in Boston are variously owned. The board has no authority to fix rates and supervise port affairs. A unit operation of the port is highly desirable."

TONIGHT'S SESSION

Tonight at 6:30 at the Copley-Plaza Hotel a "measure night" will be held by the N. E. Traffic Club. Facts of importance in and out of Boston will be exposed.

Speakers include H. H. Walker, president of the Portland-Yarmouth Steamship Owners Association, and William McPhee, a traffic engineer and economist.

TODAY'S WHO'S WHO

The subject of today's Boston sketch is Oscar G. Haines, collector of the fifth district of customs.

Haines has been in customs service for a number of years, working his way from a position as inspector to that of collector. He has a century of service in customs behind him, and has effected a berth on the revenue cutters now the Coast Guard.

Under his district of Boston Providence, New London, Portland and Bangor has been brought to a modern standard of efficiency. He has a keen insight into matters relating to safety on the seas and has been a strong advocate of the newly announced policy of inspection three times yearly instead of once yearly.

During the past year Haines and his men passed their approval of 51 new ships of shipping valued at $46,000,000.

Do you like ORANGE-PEKOE TEA?

If you do it is important that you know these facts.

ORANGE-PEKOE is not a kind nor a flavor of tea. It is a trade name given to a size of leaf resulting from the sifting process which tea leaves undergo during manufacture.

Orange-Pekoes are as various as thumbprints. Quality depends on whether the leaves were grown, picked and manufactured under favorable conditions and what country they came from.

Therefore, when you buy Orange-Pekoe tea, it is important that you know you are getting India Orange-Pekoe. Ask your grocer for India Orange-Pekoe. And to be doubly sure you are getting genuine India Tea, look for the Map of India trade mark (shown above) on the package of tea you buy.

★ The brands of tea listed below contain India Tea. And they cost you no more than the price you pay for ordinary tea.

Annie Admits She Killed 'Kinky'

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Following the killing of "The Edgewater Kid," a member of Goldie Gorio's North Side gang Kinky King, leader of the rival West Side gang, is murdered. Evidence points to Goldie but cracked politics prevent his arrest. To satisfy the public, Smack Annie, the kid's woman, and formerly Kinky's, is arrested. When the Police Chief refuses to release Annie Goldie creates havoc by destroying public property. Later, he raids the jail and kidnaps Annie The police give chase. As they close in, Goldie throws a twenty-dollar gold-piece at the chief, striking him in the eye, and escapes. Police chief enters a pact with Kinky's successor to clean up the Gorio's gang. One of the captured gangsters weakens under the third degree.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER 17

GOLDIE GORIO and his entire gang were "under cover" at Goldenrod Manor. They were living low until Goldie could learn a few things—and then Goldie would act after his own fashion.

In the rear and to the side of Goldie's stone mansion were a score of little bungalows, concealed almost as well as was the huge structure—built to conform with the terrain—built so that they seemed a part of the landscape from a distance. In these bungalows were housed Goldie's gang—all but Chimp.

The men played cards, drank and sat around all day. They were forbidden to show themselves until Goldie ordered. Their cars were locked in a huge garage, built into the hill.

Goldie's estate consisted of 60 acres. It was a hilly, wooded section, thirty miles from the Big Burg. The entrance to his place was through a huge steel gate which was locked. Two guards, ex-cons, watched the gate night and day.

High Steel Fence

Running around the estate was a high steel wire fence, with wicked barbs curving outward over the top. At night a dozen fierce police dogs roamed the grounds and four men walked along the inside of the fence day and night. At five different points were telephones concealed in the underbrush, by which the alarm could be spread quickly.

The house itself was a fortress. The innocent-looking French windows on the front—set so that at any moment by huge steel shutters which dropped when a button was pressed in the center of the house were small slots through which the noses of rifles and typewriters could be poked. The sloping front yard, cleared of trees could be effectively swept with a death-dealing fire. And it was the only approach to the house.

In real estate Goldie was known as Mr. A. G. Maher, a contractor in the Big Burg. So far his identity had been well concealed and nothing had happened which would lead reporters to his doorstep. Goldie felt secure here. He was to make his last stand in case of trouble. The only thing worrying him was the arrest of Chimp. Yet he had full reliance in Chimp.

Chimp Loyal

The cops would never be able to break him down. Chimp and Monk were his most trusted men, and a hint he had brutally shut the mouth of Chimp when he broke a bench leg over that lip would not affect his devotion to Goldie. Chimp did not know something which Monk and Goldie knew—that Goldie was to be betrayed by his own gang.

Goldie would have turned Chimp loose on the reporters—but he had not yet met with Chimp.

During the previous Goldie had noticed a number of changes in the last few days. One was the different attitude of the Kinky King gang since the ascendancy of Secretary Gleason. But the suspense had not informed Goldie of two important things—the Chief's visit to Gleason and the return of Chimp.

Goldie now decided to anticipate the move of the Kinky King mob—for it was to be War. He would follow military tactics. His strategic move would be a good offensive. He is the best defensive. He would wipe the gang out before the gang had a chance to wipe him out.

Only one thing made him hesitate—Polack Annie, the beautiful titian-haired girl was his objective now. He was madly in love with Polack Annie, though never had avowed it. Not even the sensitive intuition of woman made Polack Annie aware of it. She was decided into thinking that Goldie's unique interest in her was ground—if on his intense love for the Edgewater Kid, her lover who had died because of her love for him.

Goldie made no bold overtures to the girl. He was pleasant to her

LADS HIT BY MACHINE ON TREMONT ST.

Driver of Vehicle Held for Inquiry, but the Police Believe Him Blameless

Two boys, one 14 years old and the other 16, were killed today at Tremont st. and Temple pl. when a truck crashed into a bicycle on which they were riding. Scores of motorists and pedestrians witnessed the accident.

Frank Frustaglia, 14, of Clark st. North End was killed outright and Charles Robino, 16, also of Clark st., was so badly injured that he died soon afterward at the City hospital. Robino was riding on the handlebars.

According to reports to police the cyclists tried to cut across Tremont at between a taxicab and the truck, which police say was being operated by Patrick J. Cummings of Grove st., West Roxbury.

Cummings, with Traffic Officer William Jackson and the aid of several others, placed the boys in a taxicab and rushed them to the hospital, but the younger boy was pronounced dead on arrival. Robino had multiple injuries.

Pending a thorough investigation, which police said they believed would prove the truck driver blameless, Cummings was held on a technical charge of manslaughter.

The Robino boy was a Western Union messenger on a week's vacation and the bicycle was his.

GILLETTE'S BECOMES WORLD'S BIGGEST

South Boston Concern Acquires Auto-Strop, With Its Patent Rights

Another chapter in the romance of the nation's big business was written today with the announcement that Gillette Safety Razor Company will acquire one of its chief competitors, the Autostrop Safety Razor Company, Inc., through an exchange of stock.

Founded in 1901 with an original investment of only $5030 and with no additional capital other than from earnings the Gillette Co. has grown to be Boston's largest manufacturing enterprise, with a worldwide distribution of its products.

During this time the Gillette Co. has distributed over $50,000,000 to its shareholders in the form of cash dividends. Of this amount $75,000,000 has been distributed since 1917 when the present management went into the situation.

BIG LEGAL EXPENSE SAVED.

J. L. Aldred, chairman of the board of directors of the Gillette Co., said the off-and-on fights companies were happy to terminate litigation over patents begun some months ago, because "litigation is, regardless of the outcome, always expensive and harmful."

Announcement of the merger marks the conclusion of negotiations that had been proceeding over a period of several months, during which numerous rumors growing out of the suits brought against Gillette have been circulated, but which on announcement of the plan of consolidation had little effect upon the market price of Gillette shares.

Officials and directors of both companies had been in meeting here for two days behind closed doors before the big merger plans were finally perfected last night.

SHARE FOR SHARE BASIS

After the meeting it was announced through Loredmix & Co. that an agreement had been reached whereby the assets of Autostrop will be acquired by giving the Autostrop company a new issue of 310,000 shares of $5 preferred stock, equivalent to a share for share basis on both the A and B stock of the Autostrop which is outstanding, to a total of 310,000 shares.

The preferred stock is created by converting a block of the outstanding shares of common, purchased for this purpose, with the result that the outstanding common shares of Gillette will be reduced from 2,205,000 to 2,018,789.

The funds borrowed for this purpose will be paid off with the proceeds of $20,000,000 of 10 year 5 per cent debentures convertible into the common stock on the basis of 10 shares of Gillette for each $1000 note.

The notes are to be underwritten and a public offering will presently be made by a syndicate headed by Lee, Higginson & Co.

STOCKHOLDERS GAIN

Chairman Aldred of the Gillette board stated after the meeting that the mergers in the opinion of the directors is highly advantageous to the stockholders because earnings of the Autostrop Co. for the first months of 1930 are at a rate nearly 50% the annual record for dividend on the stock necessary to make the Autostrop a success and that the consolidated companies should be able to effect economies of a substantial amount.

Henry J. Gaisman of the Autostrop Company and another representative of his group will go on the board of Gillette, also N. Penrose Hallowell, and Charles E. Cotting of Lee Higginson & Co. and David B. Stern of A. G. Becker & Co. will represent the bankers, in addition to the present directors.

The executive committee of the company will consist of Philip Stockston, chairman; Henry J. Fuller, Henry J. Gaisman, N. Penrose Hallowell and David B. Stern.

The directors of Gillette stated that as part of the merger plan it is their intention to change the dividend dates on the common stock to quarterly periods beginning January 1, 1931. The directors state their intention upon completion of the merger to pay on January 1, 1931 a dividend of $1 to holders of record December 14, 1930.

The principal plant of Gillette is in South Boston, with factories also in Montreal and England.

GOULD-SMITH DEFENSE ENDS

The name of "David Breen" was brought today into the trial of George E. Gould of Washington st. and Joseph J. Smith of Tremont st., both of South End, charged with shooting Patrolman Owen F. Donovan of the Brighton station last July 10.

Gould and Smith are also charged with possession of revolvers and with the larceny of an automobile owned by Miss Catherine O'Driscoll of Walnut st. East Providence.

Smith testified that a few hours before the time set as the shooting hour he was out riding in an automobile with David Breen.

Asked if David Breen was "Beano" Breen, the defendant replied:

"The name is David Breen."

Smith admitted that he was shot by Patrolman Donovan but denied having done any shooting himself. He admitted, also, that he knew the missing man in the case, known as "John the Greek" and "John Kalas."

Attorney Francis Juggins, counsel for both defendants, then began his final argument.

Brokerage Debts to Total 35 Millions

The liabilities of Prince & Whitely, New York, Chicago and Boston brokerage firm, against which a creditors petition was filed last week, will total nearly $35,000,000 in the three districts, it was learned today during a hearing in federal court over the appointment of a receiver for this district.

Judge James M. Morton appointed Atty. George L. Mayberry, Boston, as receiver for this district. Liabilities of the Boston district are expected to total $1,300,000.

Two confidence men tried to put the "con" on the boys but Meyer knew both of the "con" men and flashed the "con" back.

Then the other two "con" men of the wallet and posed as Badger and Meyer drew back.

"This trip already has cost me $50.76," he said, "and I want to keep this until the deal is settled."

Finally all agreed to meet again at 4 p. m. yesterday. Meyer appeared, reported to police.

Inspectors sent to the hotel room found only an old pair of shoes and a battered brief case.

Meyer had the "con man's" wallet and $50, his entire trip and fun costing him only 70 cents.

TOT SWALLOWS SHOE BUCKLE

There is nothing palatable about a shoe buckle. Ann Marie Worthley, two years and one month old, knows that now, but when she grows up to be a big girl shoe buckles are going to be off her diet.

Ann Marie, in her innocence, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James E. Worthley of Measure st. Wakefield. She owns her share of broken dolls, a big doll in Dr. Toy Shoppe Hammett noted Boston surgeon who operated on her at Wakefield Hospital, Tuesday, and removed a shoe buckle from her stomach.

FISHING BOAT CALLS FOR AID

The fishing dragger Marietta B of Boston, with a net fouled on her propellor, was today drifting helplessly in the heavy seas off Georges Banks, while two Coastguard patrol boats hurried to her aid.

The disabled craft gave her position as 135 miles east of Boston at the edge of Georges Banks.

The 125-foot patrol boats Active and Fish Green were despatched to her assistance, and were expected to reach the Marietta B before nightfall.

INSPECTION OF CARS SUCCESS

The number of motorists who have made themselves liable to revocation of their registrations for failing to have the yellow inspection stickers on their cars has dwindled until it is almost negligible—indicating the complete success of the equipment drive closed October 1, according to Registrar George A. Parker.

The registrar announced yesterday, after hearing 300 cases of persons whose numbers had been pulled down by police or motor vehicle inspectors because their cars did not display the familiar yellow sticker, he has had to revoke at six registrations.

Until he has received the official reports of subordinates who have been hearing cases at the branch offices of the registry throughout the state, no summary can be announced.

E. Boston Woman Accused of Kidnaping Own Son

Mrs. Loretta McCarthy, 24, of 36 Everett st., East Boston, is alleged to have kidnaped her son, while he was playing with other children in front of his father's home at Paragon st., East Boston.

Nine months ago Joseph McCarthy and his wife were divorced and he was awarded custody of little John and of Joseph Jr., 3 years.

On Tuesday morning according to the charge, Mrs. McCarthy went through Princeton st. and took John away with her.

The father went to her home and demanded the boy but she refused to give him up, it is alleged. So McCarthy swore out the warrant for her arrest.

Little John, only six, doesn't know it but today he became a central figure when a kidnap warrant was issued in East Boston Court for the arrest of his mother.

HARVARD DROPS CO-ED PLAY

Harvard Dramatic Club has dropped all plans to do a "co-ed" performance this year, with Radcliffe's "Idler Club," after Dean Bernice Brown's banning of "Ovid," it was announced this morning by Henry I. Hurlburt, president of Harvard's drama organization.

"We are going ahead with plans to produce a play on our own," said Hurlburt. "Plays are being read now with a performance in view in December. There is no official censor for our plays, such as the 'Idler Club' has in Dean Brown. Our plays are selected by a play committee and usually approved by an executive committee.

"We did not realize Dean Brown would act as a censor for the proposed play with Radcliffe.

"There was nothing dull about the play as far as I can see, neither was their anything offcolor."

The play on which Dean Brown put decisive thumbs-down yesterday is written in typical, sophisticated Molnar style. It was produced on Broadway in 1929 by Gilbert Miller, with Laura Hope Crews in the cast.

The Harvard organization is quite "put out" over the Radcliffe dean's decision, its president admitted today.

So this year the two colleges won't play together.

FIRST NATIONAL STARS WILL NOT REPEAT IN PREVIOUS SUCCESSES

SUCCESSES OF OLD TO STAND

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service

Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 16—Richard Barthelmess will not be asked to repeat himself in "Fury," Graham Baker, head of the story department and co-boss of First National production with Hal Wallis, said yesterday. He is convinced the public does not care to see its favorites play a return engagement in one of their previous successes.

"Moby Dick," said Mr. Baker, "is an excellent picture, but it will be compared to 'The Sea Beast' until the end of the chapter. 'The Spoilers' is another good picture, but there will always be those who will object if the fight in the silent drama and say that it was impossible to duplicate it.

Louella O. Parsons

"We talked of bringing back 'Broken Blossoms' with Barthelmess, but it would be ridiculous to try and compete with a film that is known the world over as one of the most artistic ever produced."

"The Lost Lady," Willa Cather's novel, in which Dorothy Peterson was to star, is another story that is being shelved, due to Mr. Baker's firm belief that television are a fatal threat.

There are many fans who would send him a vote of thanks.

THERE IS NO stopping Jane Cruze once he gets started. Samuel Zeriler bought The Command Performance for him, one of New York's successful stage plays, and Jimmie is all set to go. Walter Lang will direct and L. Gordon Rigby is writing the adaptation. Betty Compson will not again play the lead for her former husband, as she is due at R. K. O. to lend her charms to 'Children of the Streets,' a Peggy Hopkins Joyce picture, and C. Stafford Dickens' play, 'The Command Performance' is an invitation that Mr. Cruze is trying to get bigger and better plays.

BIG SHOWS NOW DODGE SMALL TOWNS, CARROLL SAYS

By EARL CARROLL

Authority on beautiful girls, and producer of Earl Carroll Vanities and Earl Carroll Sketch Book, the latter revue being now at the Shubert.

An undeniable effect of the talkies on musical comedy has been the curtailment of territory and the length of the productions' seasons. Bookings must now be confined to only the larger cities such as Chicago, Boston, Cleveland and other key cities.

The amusement seekers in the smaller towns have been so educated to satisfaction with the high grade pictures they are receiving that they refuse to book up in the former style of medicine show, vaudeville and musical comedy. With stage and screen combined in a picture, but the larger cities. Besides the arrival of the talking pictures it was still possible to curtail the settings and salaries of a musical show, that is, cut it down in weight and size, to reduce high-salaried stars with good but less known talent, and furnish a good entertainment. The duplication of the public in these small towns to the actual appearance of the biggest and best stars in the talking pictures precludes success for substitutes.

Earl Carroll

THE ENTRY of talking pictures has not killed the special production for revue and musical comedy. The picture people utterly disregard costs, with future returns in mind, and the better theater producers have several ways of meeting this problem. The most efficient is to make up in merit and talent what we may not be able to picture in architecture, smartness of dialogue and engaging lines with compelling beauty. I have found to be the most positive specific for picture sits in the theater business.

Such other problems as cutting down costs to meet foreign competition are minimized by the possibility of going across seas as a big act. Capacity and the 2 price with a 50 top admission price IF the theater is large enough. I am now building a theater that will make big profits on this basis because it will have 3,000 seats. Others can do it as well.

THE BASIC ELEMENT of dramatic departments in colleges has contributed considerably to the advancement of the theater—and will do a great deal more in the future. Competent training is back of many of the successful actors who select the theater for a profession, an opportunity for a career in it. There is no more favorable place for a start in life—a place in all I know for art, and happier.

I have but one or two suggestions to offer as to the entry of college training in the business. I firmly believe the courses should cover more than the theory of the training, regardless of the importance of other academic acquirements. And as I know the theater should be more efficient between instruction and actual work.

THE COLLEGES harboring theater courses could easily establish affiliations with reputable going enterprises to their mutual advantages. A system of apprenticeships in the theater, under college guidance, might be devised. I think such a system would be more helpful, more advisable and more practical than academic instruction and amateur guidance. It is an idea worth rumination.

I could elaborate for columns in grand-loquent terms on the raising of moral and working standards, art and performance, with the entry of the college man on our business. And, at the same time, I could hear the raucous laughter of my contemporary producers seated by the college man and with good reason. So without any literary bouquets, I want to say that I truly believe the entry of college training for the business in which I have centered my life.

LIFE IN HOLLYWOOD AS EX-BOSTONIAN SEES IT

By VERONICA GREENE NAGEL
Of Hollywood, Cal., former Bostonian and wife of Curtis Nagel, motion picture producer and director.

BACK IN BOSTON, with its places of interest, winding streets, New England hospitality, old familiar faces—truly a wonderful place and although one could dwell at length on its beauty, this is not a story of Boston but of Hollywood. I went there two years ago as the wife of one of the partners of Colorart Pictures, Inc., the firm being composed of two Boston boys who made good as the producers of short subjects in color. Just now my husband and his partner, Howard C. Brown, are in Honolulu making a series of color pictures. I am spending the tercentenary holidays with my husband's family on the Jamaica-way after having motored here from Hollywood in 10 days with my year-old son.

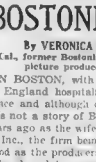
Hollywood is in the land of sunshine, beautiful homes, streets lined with eucalyptus, palm and pepper trees, and movie stars of the cinema world. As the whole area is Hollywood, nestling calmly in the foothills he is struck by its serenity and peaceful beauty. While this is true of the residential section, Hollywood boasts a thriving business center with its beautiful shops, modistes, jewelers, furriers, perfumers, tobacconists, etc. Each shop is magnificently appointed, since Hollywood is known as the style center of the world. Motion picture stars with fastidious tastes and requirements for extensive wardrobe find it unnecessary to shop in New York or Paris.



Curtis Nagel

In one lovely shop on Sunset Boulevard, the designer caters to the exotic taste of the gorgeous Greta Garbo, and here also the petite Bessie Love purchased her trousseau when she became the sweet and lovely Mrs. Harkrider.

IN THE PERFUMERS one may have perfume blended to suit one's personality. Likewise at the tobacconist the cigarettes may be blended to appeal to the most discriminating taste. Many of Hollywood's famous residents such as Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, William Powell, Ronald Colman and countless others have a humidor which have been created for their personal use and bear on each wrapper the famous coat of arms.

The Hollywood has its clubs, one of the most beautiful women's club in particular, the Embassy Club, one of the newest and smartest in Hollywood. The membership is restricted entirely of professional people and rightly the boulevard at the entrance to the club is found with spectators every evening for a glimpse of the beautiful silly gowned women. There is also a tennis club, riding club, dance or rather the most popular of these being Central Park Casino, a charming club and the Blossom room of the Hotel Roosevelt.

MONDAY NIGHT at the Roosevelt is the night when Hollywood's famous get together. Then we have the beach clubs at Santa Monica, one in particular, probably the largest, one may enter and enjoy dinner on the beach or dine and dance in the open, splendid service. A Roaming dance floor for those who like to dance and have entertainers or after one has enjoyed a swim they may have dinner served on the sand under broad gaily colored umbrellas.

This club owns a stretch of beach over 1000 feet wide which is entirely walled in by glass, thereby protecting the bathers from becoming chilled by the wind. Every known convenience for the pleasure seeker may be found at this club, even a miniature golf green. Here as everywhere else in and about Hollywood a most delightful air of leisure seems to prevail.

ONE THING I wish to tell my Boston friends is that it seems there are more beautiful cars in Hollywood than in any other part of the world; specially designed bodies, American and foreign manufacture. I have in mind two particularly beautiful cars—one owned by Gloria Swanson, a cream colored Rolls-Royce town car, the chauffeur liveried in contrasting black, and Delores Del Rio with her mulberry colored car and driver liveried to match. They make me think of huge colored bon-bons rolling down the boulevard.

(More about Hollywood from the pen of Mrs. Nagel will be printed on this page later.—Editor.)

MISS CHARLESTON adds Tom Murray, who will appear in person on the stage of the Keith-Albee next Saturday.

HOWARD STAR GRID FAN

Ann Corio, known as the "most beautiful girl in burlesque," at the Howard this week, carries her honors modestly. While she has been showered with baskets of flowers and has received many handsome gifts from admirers, it has not "turned her head." The fact that she is genuinely popular with every members of her show demonstrates that she has indeed tack and affability. Often she takes the entire chorus out to dine after the show, and foots the bills.

Miss Corio says she enjoys a football game and that she has many friends in colleges. Yale is her favorite, as she comes from a town near New Haven. But she says she also has a soft spot in her heart for Harvard. Tomorrow night Ann Corio will put forth her own midnight show at the Howard with many "extras."

HELL'S ANGELS ENDS BOSTON RUN SOON

With "Hell's Angels" approaching the end of its Boston run at the Tremont, Howard Hughes is confronted with an expensive task in removing the magnascope screen, mammoth amplifiers and special projection machines, which did so much to the fine reason of the big thriller.

His contract with the Erlanger office requires that the producer shall restore the theater to its original condition and technicians were sent from New York this week to make preliminary arrangements for the removal of the equipment.

Two baggage cars will be required to transport it to the city where it will be used next—probably Philadelphia. It will not be employed in any other theaters in New England.

So elaborate and intricate are the various sound and projection devices which Mr. Hughes has insisted upon using, that a week is required for their installation. This period was consumed at the Tremont prior to the Boston opening and another unit, closing next Saturday in Cincinnati, will be idle for a week to permit installation in Buffalo, where an engagement will open on October 27.

The receipts of these special road showings barely cover the cost of advertising and installation and they are being given in a few key cities mainly as a matter of self-satisfaction to the young Texas millionaire in seeing his $4,000,000 spectacle presented with the same embellishments employed in New York and Hollywood.

Presentations of "Hell's Angels" at the Tremont run two and three-quarter hours and there are no "shorts" or preliminary features.

Charles Ruggles will appear in person on the Metropolitan stage today as follows: P. M., 1:08, 3:25, 7:08, 9:25.

STYLE SHOWS BEAUMONT'S SPECIALTY

Whenever movie making gets dull, Harry Beaumont, director of "Those Three French Girls," now at Loew's State Theater, ought to be able to grab himself a job running a modiste shop.

Ever since he has been directing pictures Beaumont has staged style shows for spectacular scenes, but in his last two talkies he has gone farther and created original ideas for fashion salons.

In "Our Blushing Brides" he had a department store style shop and society fashion revue. In "Those Three French Girls" the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer director included another fashion show which is said to top all of his previous efforts.

Information is that as soon as it became known that Beaumont was seeking Hollywood's "six most beautiful girls" as models for the fashion sequence, a deluge of applications poured in so that the director, after making his choices, was forced to lock the door of his office at the studio and disconnect the telephone wires.

SCREEN STAR AT MET

Charles Ruggles, one of the best of the talking screen comedians, appears in person at the Metropolitan for the week beginning today. Ruggles made his first great "hit" in "Gentlemen of the Press," and repeated this in "Young Man of Manhattan," "Roadhouse Nights" and more recently in "Her Wedding Night."

Perhaps no comedian who has appeared on the talking screen has leaped into more sudden and general favor than he. On stage, Ruggles will appear in a skit of his own authorship. Ruggles will be seen at each performance in connection with the "Enchanted Forests."

FANNING WITH George Underwood

Watch Out, Harvard! Tricky Army Team Heading This Way ↑↓ Formation "B" All Its Plays May Fool You

Major Sasse Disciple of "Wooden Horse"

Harvard will doubtless look out for "Formation B" on Saturday. It is a set formation which calls for a series of deceptive plays springing from the same basic formation. It delayed buck, the cutback, the simple reverse, the double reverse, and all those maneuvers designed to keep you guessing where the punch is coming from and preventing you meeting it with broad plays. No more of the bluff Buff drives that swam on the front type of football for the Cadets. If boys from up yonder under the shadow of Storm King still have plenty of the Army fight, they can still wallop tackle to tackle and whang the center in the good old Army way, but boys at West Point are putting less stress on punch and power and more in their use of strategy and artifice. Under Major Sasse Army has turned tricks.

A long, long time ago, way back in the Long Hair days, when a football player had to have a mop of hair like a chrysanthemum or he couldn't play football at all, Pop Warner led a band of Carlisle Indians into Cambridge and stood John Harvard on his left eyebrow. It is so long ago we can't remember just who it was, but Little Bear, Bemis, Pierce or some other redskin, tucked a ball under his sweater and ran the length of the field for a touchdown, while up at the wrong end of the gridiron Harvard was playing "Button, Button, Who's Got the Button."

George Underwood.

That was Harvard's first taste of Warner football. She's had enough since then to know what can be expected from a team using the Warner system.

That is just what Army is using this year. Last winter, y'know, Major Sasse spent two whole months out there on the sunset slopes of the Rockies with Warner. He wasn't there for his health. The doughty Major is a pretty robust physical specimen.

Palo Alto is beautiful. Moonlight on the Bay of Naples hasn't anything on sunset on the Pacific side of the Sierras. The sun, a big red ball, dropping down in the blue waters with the purple shadows ever growing more purple, throwing their mantle over the hills back of you. My, Underwood, you're getting mushy, mellow, poetical. Joe must have put a stick in that gingerale. But anyway Major Sasse wasn't out there at Palo Alto, just admiring the scenery. They tell us afternoon after afternoon he and Pop Warner used to sit on the porch of Pop's bungalow.

PUMPING POP

Pop might have been watching the westering sun splash the heavens with colors even an old master couldn't paint. Maybe Major Sasse was watching it, too. But betwixt and between the Major was pumping Pop for all he was worth and getting earful after earful of Pop's opinions on wily, tricky old "Formation B."

So Arnold Horween, Cap. Ticknor and you other crimson shirted warriors, don't be surprised if the Army tries to sneak in a Wooden Horse on you next Saturday. Remember what old Virgil told you in your prep school days, "Timeo Danaos, et dona ferentes." Kc p it under your hat, but that's about all the Latin we can remember, except Gaul is divided into three parts and "Amo, amas, I loved a lass, and she was tall and slender," etc. Anyway, Harvard, look out for the Wooden Horse.

Coming back from New York where we went in an attempt to arrange that blooming Christmas Fund match between Carnera and Maloney, we ran into an old Army man we hadn't seen in many years. He gave us an earful on Army football. He was a plebe and we were a cub reporter the year Cadet Byrne was killed in the Harvard game at the Point.

Cadet Byrne—how time flys! It seems but yesterday the Missus and I were sitting in the stands there, not in the big whitewalled stadium they play on now up on the hill, but in the old wooden seated stands down on the old Plateau, watching that flaming Harvard attack soar into the Army line.

"That tackle is hurt," we remarked to Milady after one play. "Watch Harvard shoot its next play for the same spot. Football strategy calls for a smash at the weakest point."

Almost before the words had left our mouth the Harvard offense—we believe it was on a tackles back with Huntington, the demon line bucker, or Wendell, carrying the ball—launched out in a terrific buck, straight for Cadet Byrne, weak and tottering, from taking the shock of the last Crimson charge.

A mingled mass of milling players. Huntington—or was it Wendell?—had crashed through for ten yards. The hard frozen ground was strewn with fallen players. All of them got up—save one.

GRIDIRON TRAGEDY

Cadet Byrne lay there in a crumpled heap. From the sidelines rushed handlers, then coaches, then a doctor, who beckoned for a stretcher.

Directly in front of us sat an elderly couple, a sweet, gray-haired woman and a tall white-haired distinguished looking man.

"Oh, it's our boy!" we heard the mother groan. "He's hurt, Pa. He's hurt. Go down to him, quick! Go, hurry."

"There, there, Ma," consoled the father, patting the woman on the shoulder. "He'll be all right in a minute or so. Just stunned a bit, that's all."

But we saw the look in the father's eyes and the set of the jaw as he hurried down the aisle.

He was Chief of Police Byrne of Buffalo, father of the injured Cadet.

As long as we live we'll never forget the sight of that white-haired father following the stretcher off the field and that weeping mother sobbing in the stands.

We're no milksop. We have a little red blood in our veins. We've played football and got busted up a bit ourselves, but sometimes, when we think of Cadet Byrne and that old mother and father we ask ourselves, "Is it worth it? Does the reward warrant the chance?"

OLD GRAD CRATES

Heighho! We're down almost to the bottom of the column and with mighty little space left to quote our old Army friend on Army's 1930 system of play. He knows his football onions, does this gild Army grad, he knows his onions. Bend an ear to him, you men of Harvard:

"Sasse is playing Warner football to the limit. Army has the wingback system down to a T. Sasse has coached our boys till they know every play of Formation B backward and forward. Last year Harvard met a team which tried to fracture the line. This year they disfocate it, inveigling a line to open up, spread apart and let the play go through just where it least is expected.

"I've seen Army in all of her

ROPER CALLS NIGHT GAMES BRUTAL

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 16 (U.S.)—Head Coach Bill Roper of Princeton University made an attack on the present overemphasis of college football in an address before newspaper sports writers here.

Believing that overemphasis will kill the game, Roper described the current development of the game from three standpoints: Spring and early fall practice, night games, and overpublicity for individual stars.

"Football should be a boy's game, played by boys, in a boy's way," the Tiger mentor said, "overemphasis will kill the game in a few years.

"College baseball has been going down hill during the past few years, and I think that the reason for it is to be found in spring football practice at a great many colleges." He continued: "I believe that football belongs to the players and not to other people. The players should play it as hard as they possibly can. It should be a virile game, played in the fall of the year and not an all-year-round business."

"Night football is brutal and outrageous, and is likely to result in serious permanent injuries to the players. It puts them under serious eye-strain and revolutionizes their whole college program. I believe that a college man should attend classes in the morning, participate in athletics in the afternoon and study at night.

"Night football does away with this routine, because it necessitates practice at night instead of in the afternoon. This interferes with the player's meals and with their sleep at night."

Roper Attacks Publicity Given to Players

Roper went on to attack the amount of publicity which is given to individual stars, saying that it was greater than that accorded to Mussolini or United States senators.

"The result is to give the players a dwarfed perspective which handicaps them all through life," he declared.

SHARKEY SIGNS FOR ARGONNE

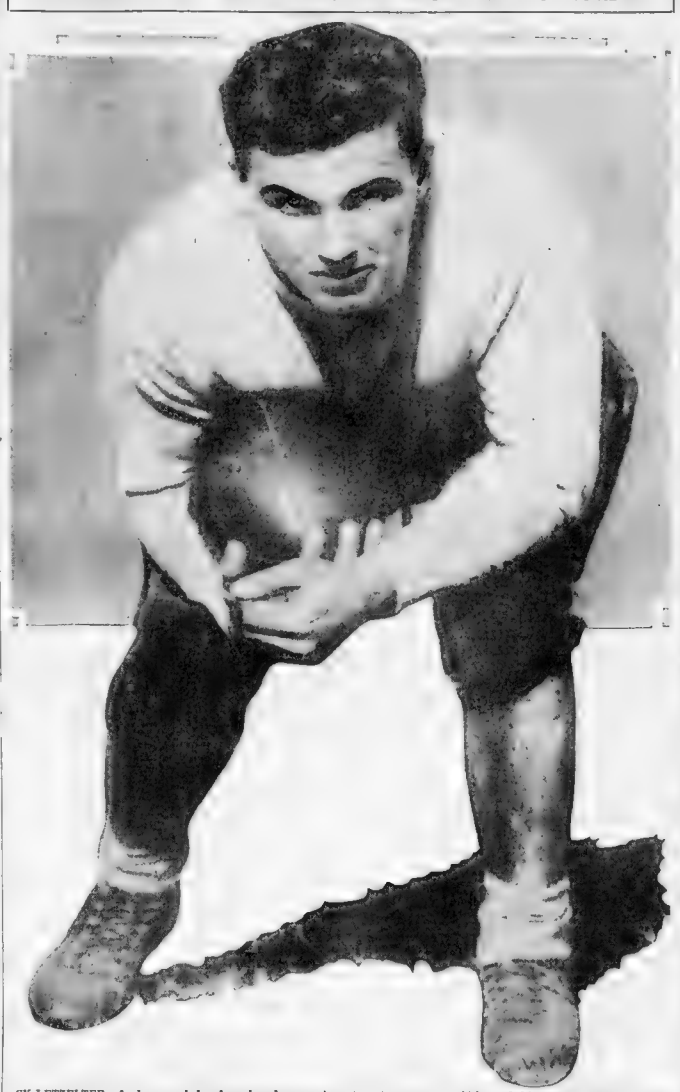
Johnny Buckley, manager of Jack Sharkey, announced today that the American heavyweight champion had agreed with Eddie Mack, Argonne A. C. boss, to box the winner of the Jack Gagnon-Con O'Kelly bout at the Argonne on Tuesday next.

Sharkey will receive a guarantee of $20,000 with a privilege of 40 per cent of the gate. The battle will take place Nov. 10 and will be Sailor Jack's first local ring appearance in more than two years.

The eight-round semi-final between Mack House and Big Bill Hartwell has already been announced.

The six-rounders will bring together Dick Howell and Frankie Stevens, Vincent Trescott and Albion Holden, Odonne Piazza and Billy Gonyea, and Joe Venuti and Charlie Kelley.

MEMBER OF WEST POINT WRECKING CREW



CY LETZELTER, of whom much has been heard concerning football before, will be in the Army backfield against Harvard. Cy was a member of the championship Carnegie Tech football team two years ago which was led by Howard Harpster. With his experience and ability he's expected to cause Harvard a good deal of trouble. He's one of the leading Army ball-carriers.

VETERAN WILL GIVE ADDED STRENGTH

Harvard's hopes for a strong line to hold Army Saturday were strengthened today when it was learned that Johnnie Trainer, veteran first string guard will be in the Crimson lineup against the Cadets.

Rob Ogden, veteran wing is also likely to be in shape by game time. Ogden's recent injury has healed fast, and while Horween will not say definitely that Ogden will start, there is a strong likelihood that Ogden will answer the referee's whistle.

This leaves only one conspicuous vacancy in the Harvard first string line. George Talbot is definitely out of the running Saturday and Henry Myerson of Brookline will fill his place at left guard beside Capt. Ben Ticknor.

Adverse weather conditions have transformed Soldiers Field into a sea of ankle deep mud, and the Harvard squad is working out in the Briggs baseball cage.

Harvard Perfecting Defense Against Army Eleven

Horween finds the mammoth glass roofed structure an ideal place for last minute coaching of the Crimson gridmen. Coach Jimmy Knox's second varsity team has been pressed into service to impersonate the visiting Sassenen, and Harvard has gained valuable experience in rehearsing against Army plays and formations.

Announcement that Columbia would use the Harvard Stadium for a practice session tomorrow morning while on their way to Hanover for their tilt with Dartmouth is causing interest around Cambridge.

The Cadet squad, which arrives today and will be quartered at Belmont Springs Country Club, will work out in the Stadium tomorrow afternoon in their only appearance before the ref's whistle sends them off against Harvard.

There is considerable doubt around Harvard as to the condition of Eddie Mays, Horween's steiar left halfback. Mays has returned to togs after his last injury but it is noted that Horween is sparing the lithe halfback considerably.

In the last two practice sessions Mays has only had part time work, with Jack Crickard receiving an equal amount of the coaches' attention. If Mays shows any sign of cracking Saturday, he will be sent promptly to the showers, and Crickard will take his place.

Trio Fighting for Harvard Tackle Post

Today and tomorrow will see the settlement of a three cornered fight between Bill Trafford, Grayson Upton and George Kuehn for Frank Kales' spot at right tackle for Harvard.

Kales, though over his injury, is working out with the Harvard B team. Horween has given Trafford, Upton and Kuehn each a full day's workout with the A eleven, and one of these three will most likely start Saturday.

Horween's official selection will be made today, when he names, as nearly as he himself can figure, the team to carry Harvard's dwindling hopes against the Kaydets.

Special attention is called by the Harvard football authorities to the schedule of events in the Stadium Saturday.

At 12 15 p. m., the Stadium gates will be opened. At 1-05, the Harvard band parades on the field, and immediately thereafter the Cadet Corps will march onto Soldiers Field.

Last year thousands of football fans arrived too late to see the great spectacle of the grey-clad Martians parade into the Stadium.

The rival teams have been given 15 minutes for their warming up period, and promptly at 2 p. m. the game commences.

Holy Cross in Long Drill for Fordham

Worcester, Oct. 16—Capt. John J. McEwan, coach of football at Holy Cross, put his first and second team lines through a strenuous half-hour line scrimmage, getting ready for the Fordham game Saturday. Then the varsity dummy scrimmaged against the third team, which was equipped with Fordham plays.

The drill lasted two hours.

Donald Kelly, Baltimore sophomore, is back again at fullback, where Leslie Griffin started last week. The balance of the first team includes McCool and Cavalieri, ends; Pyne and Fitzgerald, tackles; Clark, guard; O'Connell, quarter; Baker and Garrity, backs.

The second team line was made up of Favuli, center; Balcromas and Zyntell, guards; Himmelberg and Ryan, tackles; Callahan and Collocci, ends.

Kozak Beats DeMane, 4-3

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 16 (AP) Walter Kozak, Douglaston, N. Y., professional, opened the defense of his metropolitan professional golfers association title today with a 4 and 3 victory of Nick DeMaio of Mamaroneck at Sedgley Farm club. Kosak turned the first nine holes in 38 to make the turn five up and then ended the match on the 15th green.

Dorval-Hansen in Garden Semifinal

Jack Dorval and Knute Hansen will clash at the Boston Garden, October 23, in a scheduled 10-rounder in the semifinal to Johnny Risko and Dick Daniels.

The opening 10 will bring together Joe Zelinsky and George Parlick, 160 pounds and heavyweights.

C. F. Adams Heads Framingham Club

Charles F. Adams of Framingham, president-owner of Boston Bruins and vice-president of Boston Braves, has been elected president of Meadow Brook Club at Framingham Center. Henry G Vaughan, M. F. H. at Norfolk Hunt, has been again named vice-president, the office he has held since the organization of the club. Harold G. Denham will be secretary-treasurer.

Stewards for the coming year will be Reginald W. Bird, M. F. H at Millwood Hunt Club; Richard E Danielson, joint master at Groton Hunt; Adnah Neyhart, secretary of Boston Horse Show; Bayard Warren, member of the hunts committee of the National Steeplechase and Hunts Association, and Reginald Jenny.

Dilboy Will Hold Indoor Bouts Soon

Dilboy Post will open its indoor amateur boxing season next Thursday evening, Oct. 23, at Knights of Columbus Hall, Highland ave., Somerville, with a tourney consisting of five open classes, 125, 135, 147, 160 pounds and heavyweights.

Larry Doyle, Former Giant, Signed as Hornsby's Aide

Larry Doyle, former New York Giant second sacker, coach and scout has been signed to assist Rogers Hornsby, with the Chicago Cubs.

Doyle was one of the leading second basemen of his day and has been on the Giants pay roll for years, despite the fact that he took a couple of flings at managing minor league clubs.

Hornsby wanted to have George Sisler as his "right eye" but under the circumstances it was believed more advisable to have an Irishman, or at least a man with an Irish name, as the Rajah's aide.

M. A. C. Fullback Is Badly Injured

Amherst, Oct. 16—During a scrimmage in preparation for the C C N Y. game at New York, Saturday, Dick Hammond, fullback on the M. A. C. squad, suffered a shoulder injury which is expected to keep him out of the game the rest of the season. It is probable that Cy Kimball or Hal Wood will be moved from half to fullback and that Art Brown will take a halfback post.

Notre Dame Game May Go to Chicago

Chicago, Oct. 16—The Notre Dame-Northwestern football game of Nov. 22 may be transferred from Dyche stadium in Evanston to Soldier Field, and the bulk of proceeds turned over to the Chicago charities.

Officials in charge of Soldier Field, the largest football stadium in the world, said they would give free rent for the game, while President Walter Dill Scott of Northwestern said he approved the transfer.

Notre Dame officials are expected to approve the transfer.

Mrs. Hill 5 Up on Maureen Orcutt After Nine Holes

SHOOTS A 38 IN WOMEN'S GOLF

Los Angeles, Oct. 16 (AP)—Mrs. O. S. Hill of Kansas City, medalist of the 34th annual women's national golf tournament was five up on Miss Maureen Orcutt, Haworth, N. J., at the end of nine holes today, Mrs. Hill shot a 38, one under par compared with 43 for her opponent.

Mrs. Hill got off to a flying start taking a birdie on the first hole and had a par five on the second to move two up on Miss Maureen Orcutt, Haworth, N. J.

The medalist was on the first green in three and then in one putt for a four while her Eastern opponent two-putted. Miss Orcutt chipped past the pin and two putted the second for a six, one over par.

Miss Orcutt dropped the third straight hole to Mrs. Hill when she pulled her drive into the rough and then topped her third, a spade, taking two putts for a six. Mrs. Hill had a beautiful drive and second but three-putted for a five.

Fourth Hole Is Halved

They halved the fourth after the Kansas City woman slid a five-foot putt and Miss Orcutt drove the green but three-putted for a four.

Mrs. Hill and Miss Orcutt halved the fifth and sixth with par fives and fours, but the Kansas City matron went 4 up on the difficult seventh.

Both took fives on the 325-yard eighth for par. Miss Orcutt's ball rimmed Mrs. Hill who had a chance for a birdie. Mrs. Hill putted safe and halved the hole.

On the ninth the Kansas City contender was on with her spoon shot from the tee and sank an eight foot putt for a birdie two, while Miss Orcutt, also in on one, took two putts.

The cards:

Out	5 5 6 3 5 6 4 4 5—38
Mrs. Hill:	4 5 5 4 5 4 4 5 5—38

games this year. You know I know football, the game is a means with me, have studied it close and long. If these Army plays fooled me, they'll fool the rest of the spectators in the stands and, what's more, will fool Harvard. Mark my words, they'll fool Harvard.

"Wait till you see Army's guards deploy out of line and head interference on wide sweeps. Wait till you see how successful Army is in concealing the ball and screening its attack. Warner in his palmy day never coached an eleven into playing a brand of football that would keep opponents guessing so futilely as does the Army team this year. Forward passing? Say, Harvard never will know where those passes are coming from or where they're going."

Watch out, Harvard! Watch out for the Wooden Horse!

A CYRIL WALKER STUDY FOR LIGHTWEIGHT PLAYERS

Cyril Walker weighs probably not more than 125 pounds. He is also short in stature, but he won the 1924 U. S. open championship and therefore a little study of his methods is interesting to golfers, especially those of about the same height and weight as Walker was or is.

Remember that Cyril drives quite a long ball and his style is orthodox.

I have selected pictures 1 and 3 so that you can compare the left arm swing (1) with the down swing (3) at a similar point.

In picture 1 we see a transference of weight on to the right foot, a rotary motion of the shoulders and hips and a lateral motion of the whole body, not part of the body.

You will observe that the left arm is slightly straighter on the back swing than it is on the down swing. Bobby Jones has declared that "sometimes I wonder if our concern over the straight left arm is not a useless bother."

In picture 3 we see that Cyril Walker's initial movement on the down swing is not an unwinding of the rotary motion of the shoulders and hips and a lateral motion of the body from larger and heavier players.

You will also notice in the third picture that Cyril's left heel has not yet gone down. Bobby Jones has stated, almost at the same instant that the downward stroke begins, the left heel, which has been lifted from the ground during the back swing, plants itself firmly on the ground. Lee Wood has likewise declared that "sometimes I wonder if our concern over the straight left arm is not a useless bother."

In picture 3 we see that Cyril Walker's initial movement on the down swing is not an unwinding of the rotary motion of the shoulders and hips, but a distinct change of plane.

In the third picture we see the club very plainly, and, as I happen to know that these are action photographs, Cyril must have developed great speed from that point.

B. U. REGULARS DROPPED BY MAHANEY

Lee Stone, varsity tackle and Jimmy Truden, first-string guard of the Boston University eleven, have been suspended by Coach Hilary Mahaney for violation of training rules.

Jimmy Truden was one of the most promising candidates that reported this fall. Although a sophomore he showed enough ability to win a starting position against Dartmouth, last week, and stated to start the Middlebury game Saturday. He has not been hurt, but under no considera tion will he be allowed to return to he squad.

The loss of Lee Stone will also be keenly felt. Lee won his letter last year and has been used in every game this fall. He was a valuable relief man.

In addition to the loss of these two men, Trainer Joe Gilmore announced today that Phil Hootstein, the Terrier's biggest offensive triple threat, will be out for at least two weeks.

In spite of the loss of these regulars, Boston University's chances of winning remain good, as Middlebury has only a mediocre eleven

PAIR TIED IN "MET" GOLF

White Plains, N. Y., Oct. 16 (US)—Facing a frisky wind, a gusty wind, a small band of professionals competed two disturbed qualifying rounds for the metropolitan match play championship at Ged ney Farms.

At the close of the toilsome day the lowest result was the 147's registered by both Billy Burke of Round Hill and young Herman Barron of Tamaracks.

"His Weeness" Bobby Cruickshank with a pair of 74's anchored in third place with Fred Mc Leod, Dougall, assistant professional at Mount Kisco was fourth with 149 Many of the pros were unhappy in the disagreeable weather but none of the nine injured golfers of the district found it quite fly except Tommy Harmon of Montclair, who couldn't shoot 80. It was at this figure that the last play of the 32 spared the tear of match play There were eight ties at this numeral and a playoff was necessary to determine which should fill the 31st and 32d brackets.

Gene Sarazen, who is the favorite to win the tourney now won 39 Walter Kranak, qualified comfortably at 152 16 s. Joe Turnesa, Paul Circelli and Tony Patroni.

Neither Johnny Farrell nor Joe Turnesa exerted themselves unduly Each contrived a rather wan re gone total of 76, Johnny making a 79 and a 78, and Joe an 80 and 77.

Kosnak, the champion, was exempt from qualifying and the tournament rolled under way without Willie MacFarlane, Willie Klein and Mike Brady. No reason was given for the absence of the two Willies, but it was known that Brady is preparing himself for an appendicitis operation next week

B. C. OFF FOR VILLANOVA TONIGHT

Joe McKenney has made his selection of the players who will make the trip to Philadelphia. The squad will leave at 10 o'clock tonight.

McKinney will start much the same lineup that opened the holiday battle with Fordham. There will be few new faces, but it is expected that Mallet the regular half back, who sustained an injury to his spine a week ago, will be back Mallet is about the best interfering back at the Heights and though he does not appear large and powerful enough to carry out the assignments, he has proven conclusively the ideal man for the job

Whether or not George Colbert will start on the quarter back position is as yet undecided by the Boston College coaches. Most likely Coupe will be held on the bench until McKenney sizes up the Bluiderher game. George has proven the saviour of the Eagles many than once with his bewildering forward passing.

A year ago the Eagles tied Villanova's when McKenny sent Colbert into the game to try an aerial attack. This proved more successful and a touchdown resulted when Coupe hurled a long pass to Antex, who ran half the length of the field to score. Coppie tied it all up by kicking the goal

Billy Boehner Will Start Against Villanova at Quarter

The probable starting backfield of the Boston team will be Billy Boehner calling signals to Chessy Antes at left half, Mallet, right half, with Joe Keller at fullback. Mike Vodekin, whose starting outpack of the Fordham kickoff in the last quarter ramie near going for a touchdown, will serve in a relief role for Coupe.

Capt Johnny Dixon, who has been bothered by an injured shoulder all fall, is expected to be in shape to play against Villanova.

DAMON RUNYON SAYS:

Copyright 1930 by Universal Service, Inc.

New York, Oct. 16 (US)—It has been a matter of 27 hard winters and a doggone sight tougher summers since Mr. Clark Griffith, then blithely known as "The Silver Squirrel"—or was it "Fox?"—instituted the job of manager of the Yankees on Manhattan Island.

That is to say, "The Silver Fox" or was it "Squirrel?"—hung up his b's one last in his men's town as manager No. 1. That was in the year 1903. A lot of bad booze has run under the baseball bridge since last time.

Now comes manager No. 10, in the portly person of Mr. Joseph McCarthy, late of Chicago, and the Cubs and welcome to our city. Low It is only fair to give him that much Damon Runyon up to, and including July 4 next, anyway. Then we shall see.

Now ten managers in 27 years isn't a lot of managers, at that, compared to other clubs, although our other big town rivals, the N. Y. Giants," has been segmashing along for exactly the same length of time with just one, the Hon. John J McGraw.

Well, prior to the advent of Mr. McGraw the said "Jints" had 14 on 15 managers in 12 years. So you see, it depends on who is the manager.

Under the individual ownership of Col. Jake Ruppert, the Yankees have had but two managers, the late Miller Huggins and Bob Shawkey. Had Huggins lived, he would have been the only one.

From the time Col. Ruppert and Col. Tillinghast L'Hommedieu Huston, now known as "the hermit of the Alhambra" bought the Yanks in 1915 the club has had but three managers, the lamented Bill Donovan being the other.

Griffith Was First Manager of Yankees

Clark Griffith, now the president and one of the chief owners of the Washington club, and a wealthy man, held the managership of the Yankees from the time of the invasion of Manhattan Island by the American League until 1908 when he was succeeded during the playing season by the redoubtable Kid Elberfeld. The club finished last that year.

The American Leaguers probably thought they were handing the Yanks the pennant as a booby prize at the time of the invasion, as they, Griffith & associates, thought. He finished fourth his first year, and second in 1904, Jimmy Collins piloting him over the Boston club in a tight finish.

Fielder Jones and his "fighting Sox" finished third in 1905, but got home ahead of Griffs Yanks in 1906, and thereafter Griff drifted to fifth, and finally to last when Elberfeld took his job.

Kid Elberfeld was not that season, and then in 1908 came George Stallings to finish fifth. The following year, Stallings was up there second, when he was ousted in favor of the most brilliant fig baseman of all time, Hal Chase

The magician of the baseball infield, who was to finally pass out of organized baseball under a dark cloud, lasted through the season of 1911 as manager, the club climbing up to sixth. Then came Harry Wolverton with a tailender in 1912.

Frank Chance, who had managed the Chicago Cubs in a flock of pennants, tried it from 1913 until part of 1914, when he gave up in disgust, and Roger Peckinpaugh spaced out the remainder of the season.

Wild Bill Donovan Held Reins 3 Years

Wild Bill Donovan, once a great pitcher and personally one of the most popular characters ever in baseball, lasted three years—1915, 1916 and 1917. He got up to fourth in 1916, and was sixth the following year.

The war was on, and Col. Tilling hast L'Hommedieu Huston was over in France a-engineering of it, when Col. Ruppert decided that a managerial chance was necessary, a decision in which Col Huston concurred all right enough but in which he differed with his partner on an important point

Col. Huston wanted your Uncle Wilbert Robinson named as Donovan's successor but Col Ruppert on the strength of a single interview, had been taken by Miller Huggins' brogue and business-like manner.

So he named Huggins, and it was that selection that probably had much to do with the subsequent split of the celebrated Colonel firm, Colonel Jake buying out Colonel Til Thus Huggins took up the managerial task in 1918 to finish fourth that year and third in 1919 and 1920.

Just as the folks were saying that Hug wasn't so hot as a manager, he stepped out and won his first pennant in 1921, following that up by taking two more flags, making the world's championship in 1923. That same little Hug a big man in baseball

He finished second in 1924, was a bad seventh in 1925 and came on to win another pennant in 1926. He also finished first in 1927 and 1928, establishing himself as one of the all-time great managers of the baseball game.

He died in the Winter of 1929 after 12 years of service with the Yankees, a long career for a manager. The appointment of Bob Shawkey, the former Yankee pitcher, as his successor was something of a surprise, but no more so than the appearance of McCarthy as a candidate for the job.

Old Timers' Golf Definitely Off

For the first time in at least 18 years George Wright's reunion of the old time golfers has been called off definitely. It was originally intended to stage the party at Wollaston but the rain blocked progress And as the weather bureau reports dismal days ahead it was decided the veteran squirrels were to forget it altogether this sea

Fittons to Play at Peabody Sunday

There will be no game at Fort Banks Wednesday next Sunday, however Fitton football team of East Boston will journey to Peabody where they will tie the opponents of the Peabody Elks.

The entire net proceeds will go towards the Christmas basket fund of the Peabody Elks. One side of the field has been reserved for the rooters of the Fittons and they will make the trip over the road to witness the game.

The Fittons, who have won five straight games, feel confident they will win from the Peabody Elks. Dave Guarnaccia and Tom Gallagan, former Harvard stars will be in the Fitton lineup.

Four N. H. Regulars on Injured List

Durham N. H., Oct. 16—Following the news that Captain Ralph Hawkes, Theodos and Eustis, probably would not be able to play against Maine, Trainer Bill Marshall announced it was impossible for Dick Eustis, wideat ball-carrying ace would be in shape Saturday. Eustis has a severe gash in his leg received during the Lowell Tech game.

McGowan of Fairhaven, who is Eustis substitute is being groomed to start Saturday. Mc Gowan is a hard-running back, but lacks the considerably before cutting back on off-tackle plays. He is a fair passer and a better than average punter. Elizabeth and Reverett is the two other wingmore backs are also looking to an special attention.

Equipoise, the colt belonging to Harry Payne Whitney, is expected to be on to the pony a heavy favorite

Providence Ace Out of Clarkson Game

Providence Oct 16—Micky Ferrara Providence brickfield ace received a trouble house in the Coast Guard game of last week end and may be out of action when the Friars meet Clarkson College Saturday Ferrara photos have failed to show any fractures in Ferrara's shoulder, and as a result he will probably be ready to return to the lineup for the Canisius game.

Sasse's "Warner System" Will Be Tested at Harvard

CADET COACH CONFIDENT OF SUCCESS

By BILL GRIMES

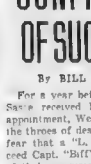
For a year before Maj. Ralph Sasse received his head coach appointment, West Point was in the throes of despair, due to the fear that a "L. P." would succeed Capt. "Biff" Jones, instead of their unanimous choice.

On July 1, 1929, a score or more of promising football players enrolled with the class of 1933 at the United States Military Academy. The outstanding football appointees were known to the authorities at the Point months before they matriculated.

The Army foresaw a new era in the offing for in that plebe class were replacements for Chris Cagle, "Merle" Murrell, Herb Gibner, Dick O'Keefe and George Perry. Also the Army was cognizant of the fact that Biff Jones would be ordered back to active duty at the conclusion of that season and the desired a head coach who was thoroughly acclimated and in sympathy with current conditions at West Point.

From the start of last season the vet has stressed heavily the angle that Biff Jones was winding up his coaching career at the Point. Mutters and varied predictions were flashed across the country as to who would succeed Jones.

Confusion became so alarming that, in order to thwart the press reports the Army authorities, after paying them to secrecy, took the football writers into their confidence and admitted that Jones would resign, and supplemented that statement with the declaration that Major Ralph Sasse was, in their opinion, "Biff's" logical successor.



Bill Grimes

West Point Alumni Seek Football Control

Desire to control the football situation by alumni cliques is a prevalent at West Point as it is in all universities and colleges. The Army had hardly recovered from reaction of the Oliphant threat, when necessitated Charlie Daly's action as head coach until Oliphant resigned from the Army. The Army did not seek nor encourage any suggestions from the alumni.

Moreover, the Army was particularly anxious to avoid pressure by Washington politicians. The Army knew Sasse and rated him highly as a man and a coach.

And it was quite obvious that "Biff" Jones was one of the major's many disciples.

The first indication offered that Capt. Jones was in favor of Major Sasse and also had favored the adoption of the Warner system for the plebe team a year ago. The latter returned his old offense but the plebes were drilled daily on the running attack, which Leland Stanford has executed with such success. Whereas, the 1932 plebe team did not turn in a single victory, the last year first class men went through the season without a defeat.

Sasse Could Start Entire 1933 Backfield

Doubtless the success of the 1933 plebe team was a combination of the Warner system and high class, experienced talent. This is the second season the West Point starting backfield, except for the quarterback, against Harvard has been playing the Warner system.

Without weakening the Army, Biff Jones could send the entire last year plebe backfield, for Joe McWilliams, the chunky little fullback, was a football player in a capital [illegible] throughout every one of the five foot eight inches of stature.

The Army is using the double wing back Warner formation but the other two backs are playing farther back of the scrimmage line than this year a Stanford team. The wing backs play close to the line and spill over the ends with the quarter about three yards back and the fullback six yards from the line.

Speed and perfect timing are the essentials to success in every style of offense but more particularly so when a team adopts the Warner offense.

Many colleges have tried the Warner system but no club in the East has been able to reach any degree of perfection of the present West Point eleven.

First Real Test for Army's New System

Due to the experienced backfield men acquired from the plebe team, such as Cy Letzeiser, Ken Fields, Ed Herb, Bill Frentzel and Harry Sebastian, many are of the opinion that the Army would function under any system. Possibly they would. Ken Fields and Bill Frentzel started their collegiate football under Bob Zuppke at the University of Illinois. Ed Herb came to the Point with his head filled with the Andy Kerr style of play. Cy Letzeiser played under Wally Steffin at Carnegie Tech for large years and Harry Sebastian acquired some of his knowledge from Ray Morrison at S. M. U.

Naturally, these stars, when they entered West Point leaned strongly toward the type of offense they played at college, but they were easy converts, for "Pop" Warner is recognized as the last word in offensive football.

Major Sasse has been a strong advocate of the Warner system for years. At the start of the season some of the critics attempted to belittle Sasse's end over end punt from the center, an idea sold him by "Pop" Warner, but to no avail.

West Point and its new eleven will be subjected to its first real test in the Stadium on Saturday, although Chris Cagle and Heinz Murrell who thrilled the crowds for the past two years, will be absent. Army has an even chance of staving off defeat for the third consecutive year against Harvard, due to the advent of Maj Ralph Sasse as head coach, the Warner system and the talent offered by the class of 1933.

BRUINS OPEN WITH N. Y. A'S

The Boston Bruins, American champions, will pry the lid of the National Hockey League season on Armistice Day, November 11, when they will tackle the New York Americans at the Boston Garden.

With all of last year's stars and a number of promising rookies ready to begin practice next week, Manager-Art Ross is confident that his club will be a winner from the start this season and will capture not only the American championship but the Stanley Cup, emblematic of world's hockey supremacy, as well as [illegible] of the N. H. L.

There will be a meeting of the league executives at Toronto on Saturday at which the schedule for the coming season will be ratified and the shift of the Pittsburgh franchise to Philadelphia will be considered. Ross and possibly President Charles F. Adams will represent the Bruins at the conference.

Large Entry List for St. Joe's Show

After a lapse of three weeks the St. Joe's Athletic Club will resume at Mechanics Building on Saturday night. A large entry list has been received so the first set-to will start at 7:30.

Four six-round bouts on the card, including the 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 and light heavies. The latter class is expected to feature.

There are many newcomers to this week's St. Joe's bouts for the sponsors are anxious to get on the N. S. team for the International [illegible] in Lathei Lil, Cuba, arranging for late this winter.

Schoolboy Chatter

Because of the downpour of the last few days the schoolboy double-header between Charlestown and Jamaica and South Boston and Memorial was called off today.

The Fens Stadium, which was to be the scene of the twin bill, was flooded and unfit for the game.

Huntington school has got a stiff battle on its hands tomorrow when Huntington school, meeting the Tufts second varsity eleven.

Danny Gildea, coach of Everett, has been very busy and since his team was nipped by Newton last Saturday, but is looking forward to coming games with an optimistic gleam in his eye.

For Captain Sid Goodstein, star tackle, who makes a big difference in the play of the Everett frontier, is due to return for next Saturday's contest with Brookline, and four more letter men of a year ago are due back soon. These four were lost to the team because of studies. They are Bill Rogers, Ed Brailey, Buster Cohalan and Jack McLain. What a difference this quartet should make in Everett's fortunes tomorrow.

Malden high school is on the lookout for a new line coach now that Warren McGuirk has given up the job. Malden had a powerful line a year ago under the tutelage of the former B. C. captain and was doing nicely this year.

McGuirk is in business and playing professional football with the Providence Steamrollers and feels that the Malden job was making him work more than he should.

Tony Geniawicz is likely to be the highest scoring school boy football player when he wakes up next Sunday morning. He is now 13 points behind Rand of Salem who has accumulated 73 by his scampering through the hustles. Rand will be idle on Saturday and Geniawicz should be able to make up the difference if he's in a scoring mood.

Coach Bill Pendergast of Dorchester feels that the loss of Eddie Meleedy in the Mechanic Arts game cost him the decision. But Dorchester still believes it can cop the city buming. Meleedy will be [illegible] the Dingo soon.

Italian Mat Mammoth in Feature Bout at Arena

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Grunts and groans, all sorts of locks, grips and tosses and the customary cheers and jeers of the audience will be seen and heard again at the Boston Arena tonight when Promoter Paul Bowser stages his first show of the winter season.

The feature of the performances will be the showing of a new giant, who comes in Boston close on the heels of Camera and Santo, colossal regimen.

The newest display of over-sized meat will be put on by Rosario Impellitier, who is heavier than Camera and Santo, tipping the beams at 285 pounds.

Impellitier is an Italian who was discovered by Reno Giaroni, former well-known wrestler, and Giaroni has brought Impellitier along slowly, and feels that his product is bound to be one of the best men in the wrestling game before he grows much larger.

Impellitier meets Jack Evans, Canadian timber jane tonight and will be a favorite to win. He is a big advantage in size over his opponent, although he lacks in experience.

Jack Sherry of Ohio will be the main bout with Paul Jones of Poland. It will be two falls out of three. Sherry has been showing good wrestling exhibitions but will have a tough grapple with Jones, who weighs 210 pounds and is as tough as most club grapplers.

Marin Plesina, whose nickname is "Tarzan" will match his strength with Gene Leduc of Montreal. Leduc is nothing to be overlooked.

The opening bout will bring together Nick Karakas, the former lightweight champion and Gene Bruce of Springfield.

Providence, Oct. 16—Brown and Yale have played 30 varsity football games since 1894, and the Elis has won a sweeping majority of the tilts.

Brown has won four games, one game was tied, and Yale has taken 25. Brown has scored in 14 of the [illegible] and Yale has failed to score [illegible] of the games. The [illegible] was 40-0 in 1905 and the [illegible] was a 10 to 0 [illegible].

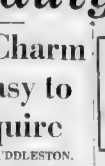
Beauty Hints for Milady in Changeable Fall Weather

Hair Charm Is Easy to Acquire

By MISS HUDDLESTON.

SOME TIME ago we discussed the effect of the waving fluids upon the hair. We stressed particularly the effect of those fluids which leave a residue on the hair.



Josephine Huddleston

Quite naturally it follows that if these heavy lotions leave traces on the hair itself, then the scalp is also covered with the fluid and the pores clogged. The results in faulty gland and duct activity in the scalp and dandruff soon makes its appearance. Also the hair is apt to become exceedingly dry and lustreless when such lotions are used too frequently.

However, unless you or the operator who sets a wave in your hair takes unusual pains the wave will not have the lasting qualities that are gained when waving lotions are used. All of which brings us to an old-fashioned but highly satisfactory waving lotion which can be used consistently without harm to the hair or scalp. It is sugar water!

Just add half a teaspoonful of granulated sugar to one cupful of cold water and stir the liquid until the sugar has dissolved. Use as you would any other waving fluid.

The hair will be stiff when dry, but this disappears as soon as it has been combed, and it doesn't leave a residue on the hair or scalp, besides it does not become clogged.

Also another highly pleasing result is gained from the use of sugar water as a waving fluid. Suppose the hair becomes rumpled and the trimness of the wave outlines lost. Just dampen the comb, run it through the hair, push up the waves, curl the ends again and let the hair dry. It will be as neat and trim as when combed out again as a new wave would be. And without the additional use of waving fluid.

By resetting the hair this way each day the freshness of your wave will be assured.

At the present season the change in weather, diet and activity frequently results in a blotched complexion. Not that the condition becomes critical, but slight acid spots occur and minor eruptions some of them never actually breaking through into real abrasions. A simple remedy for clearing the skin is found in taking Epsom salts.

Begin the Epsom salts treatment by taking two heaping teaspoonfuls in one glass of very hot water. This should be taken upon rising and before breakfast. Then every morning for one week take one-half teaspoonful of the salt in one glass of water.

Epsom salts is particularly good purging the system of impurities and correcting the physical disorders that results when we change our habits to fit the climatic changes.

You will find that such treatment clears the skin beautifully and is well worth trying.

The cuticle around the finger nails is apt to suffer as the first brisk winds of the season blow and before we have become habituated to the constant wearing of gloves at this season. Remember that drying the hands thoroughly each time they are washed will go far toward preventing chapping and roughness of the cuticle.

What's in Fashion?

More Conservative Young Men

Directed by AMOS PARRISH

NEW YORK, Oct. 16—Have you noticed this? That there aren't so many "rah-rah" college boy styles seen on young men these days.

Whether they're on the campus, the street, or the business office, the clothes younger men are wearing now have a certain formality . . . an attention to detail . . . that makes them look as well dressed as their well-dressed elders.

Take their overcoats for instance. That camel's hair or fleece or llama polo coat they like so well—it's natural in roughand-ready and it's linen easy—with notched lapels, double stitching and long, full lines.

You can see this in the single-breasted coat illustrated. The double-breasted version is similar in detail.

Most of these coats have full, plain, box backs. Some have half belts. And while you usually see them in tan, there are plenty of the more formal blues and oxfords.

Younger men have taken to wearing the fly front Chesterfield, too, of blue or oxford melton cloth with self or velvet collar. This, too, is a straight box coat or very slightly fitted at the waist. The same kind of coat many older men are wearing.

Natural shoulders . . . notched lapels.

Sack-Suits

What suits are they wearing most? Easily the two or three button sack suit with notched lapels and natural shoulders as in the illustration. Some prefer the coming three-button, but retain the slight suggestion of fit.

With these suits a button vests with rather high cuff neck line. Full trousers 20 inches at the cuffs. And the most popular materials are the unfinished worsteds, cheviots and tweeds—in grays, blue-grays and browns.

But they're also wearing more double-breasted suits than they used to, especially flannel six-button affairs that are quite English looking.

Campus Fashions

Knickers are important fashions on the campus, and odd coats and trouser combinations—brown tweed coats and gray trousers, for example, are seen at many of the eastern universities. Sport sweaters—plain or small patterned—are worn, and pop ties with both long trousers and knickers.

Just as with the older man, the snap brim, raw edge felt with punched or tapered crown is the first choice of these well-dressed younger men. For formal wear, the derby is preferred, though the Homburg also is worn by many.

Accessories

Soft collar attached shirts are practically universal. Plain white and blue, mostly, and either buttoned down or pinned. Oxford and broadcloth are the favorite materials, with madras for second choice.

Small patterned ties with lighter figures on dark grounds lean striped ties. And the younger man's striped tie is a trifle gayer than the older man's, in both broad and pencil stripes.

Plain color ties are as much a favorite with young as with older men.

Many college men like their diamond patterned or argyle hose too well to give them up. So you see them on the campus in lightweight woods and flales.

Other than a prefer plain and clocked hose in silk, silk-and-wool and lisle.

You'll see more full, box-toe oxfords in smooth calf or pebbled grain. But the perforated wingtip brogue is going to walk into many a stadium and on many a campus this fall.

Closeup of Modern Woman

By HELEN ROWLAND

CUTTING THE top off the evening gown and adding it to the length of the shirt is just another of woman's little devices for keeping a man's eyes on her, without tiring his optic nerve.

In these days of heart-balm and alimony, the prodigal husband has to watch his step to keep from changing roles with the fatted calf.

A man is not old, until he stops trying to find a brand-new emotional thrill, and begins trying to acquire the ability to feel a few of the old ones.

At last, the modern girl's hair appears to have recovered from its growing pains, passed the wild cowlick stage and settled down primly to the age of discretion.

By the time a woman has had enough practice to learn how to kiss with the technique of a divorcee, the enthusiasm of a flapper and the discrimination of an expert, alas, her kissing days are usually over.

All those breakfast-table discussions, which make married life so dreary, would die a sudden death, if husbands would only begin the day by telling wives how sweet they are, and wives by telling husbands how wonderful they are two statements to which nobody ever offered an argument.

Many a man barters love, youth, enthusiasm, a good disposition and his top hair for riches—and then is chagrined to discover that they were the only things worth having, and that all his money won't buy them back, again.

You can lead the American woman to almost any height, NEW style; but you can't drag her back to the old ones she has begun hopelessly to outgrow in the family home.

"The modern woman flatters herself that she knows a lot more about men than her mother did; but the only girl who has no false illusions about the alibi-sex is the one who takes their office telephone calls.

Gelatine Makes Good Dishes for Parties

By MARTHA LEE

Organizer and Conductor of New England's Largest Homemakers' Club of Over 37,000

THERE ARE few more successful aids to the ambitious "party thrower" than gelatine. It holds fruits in a gently embracing firmness and stretches the small amounts of juices to an unbelievable length. For the foundation of delightful soups are quite the thing, where would we be without gelatine, cream whips, parfaits, charlotte russes, etc.?

Martha Lee

A light and airy touch to the heavy, uninspired meal is the surprise ending of a gelatine dessert, which has all the virtues of being decorative as well as restoring balance to the too heavy meat dish.

Here are a few gelatine concoctions which are real triumphs, and I pass them on to you, with my blessing!

APRICOT SPONGE LOAF

Soften four tsp. gelatine in four tbsp. cold water, then dissolve in the boiling syrup drained from four cups apricots. Add four tbsp. sugar, four tbsp. lemon juice, and cool. When about ready to set, fold in two stiffly beaten egg whites and pour into a loafshaped mold and set in the ice box until stiff and cool. Unmold upon an oblong platter and around the base lay an overlapping band of the apricots. Pass whipped cream on the side or pile it on top of the mold and sprinkle with chopped pistachio nuts.

PEACH GLOW

Dissolve two packages lemon gelatine in two cups boiling water. Cool and divide in two parts. To the first part add one cup of cold water. If you use canned peaches drain a small can and arrange about half a can of sliced peaches in the bottom of a very decorative mold, sprinkle ginger around on top and pour in a little of the clear jelly. When this has set, add the rest and set in the ice box to cool. To the second half of the gelatine add two tbsp. corn syrup and four tbsp. confectioners sugar. When about ready to congeal, fold in one cup beaten cream, one-fourth cup chopped walnuts and pour on top of the already stiff clear jelly in the mold. Chill thoroughly. Unmold and garnish around the base with the remaining peaches, whipped cream and maraschino cherries.

JELLIED CUSTARD

1 package lemon gelatine
1 cup boiling water
2 cups milk
1 egg
¼ cup sugar
¼ tsp. salt

Make a soft custard of the last four ingredients as follows: Beat egg slightly, add sugar and salt, mix well. Pour on milk and cook in double boiler, stirring until it thickens sufficiently to coat the spoon. Cool. Dissolve lemon gelatine in boiling water. Cool. When it begins to thicken, add custard and pour into molds. Chill until firm. Serve with fruit sauce. For variation, add ½ cup of any preserved fruit with the custard, using the syrup drained from the fruit as a sauce. This recipe serves 12.

For other equally delicious gelatine thoughts, drop me a line and I gladly send them on to you.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

Is it true that two can live as cheaply as one, or that it costs no more to be married than single? My girl friend and I are in love with each other, but I make only $18.00 a week. She and her family think we ought to marry, and assure me it will cost almost nothing. What can I say to them?

Beatrice Fairfax

PUZZLED BOY FRIEND.

Dear Boy Friend—The less said to your girl friend's family, the better, my dear boy, since they are so foolishly eager to marry off their daughter that they are willing to trap you with absurdities. Escape while you can, and take my word for it that it costs twice as much to support two persons as it does to support one, whether they are married or not. But it is clear that even more than money, you need backbone and the ability to resist influence. If you haven't the courage to say firmly to your girl friend that you are determined not to marry until you have a certain income, write her a letter. And could you get a job in another town meanwhile? I don't like to suggest flight, but in your case it almost seems necessary.

Cleanliness Keeps Baby in Good Health

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

WE OCCASIONALLY hear some mother say her baby has "spree," or thrush." These are the names used to describe a condition of the mouth to which children, particularly babies, are liable.

A similar form of sore mouth is found in all ages, and is known to the doctors as "stomatitis." Grown people often develop ungle ulcers or "canker sores."

Dr. Copeland

Sprue appears as small white ulcers on the tongue, gums and the roof of the mouth. These ulcers resemble small particles of curdled milk. If neglected, the ulcers may spread through the whole digestive system, but usually they are confined to the mouth.

The child complains first of pain or tenderness of the gums. The inner surfaces of the cheeks and the gums are spotted with white patches. When wiped off these patches leaves small raw spots, small ulcers.

As the trouble goes on the gums become very sensitive. Later they are swollen and spongy and bleed when touched. In fact, the mouth is so sore that the child cannot take solid food.

Lack of cleanliness is generally the cause of sprue. Unclean spoons, unclean feeding bottles, unclean utensils used in the preparation of the foodmay, some form of neglect is at the foundation of the trouble.

Prevention is better than cure in all human ills. It is doubly true of digestive ailments of children. The bottles, nipples and all utensils used in preparing the baby's food must be kept scrupulously clean. After each feeding the mouth should be cleaned with a soft absorbine wash. Lime water or a solution of bicarbonate of soda can be used. Add a teaspoonful of the soda to a glass of water.

A piece of soft cloth or absorbent cotton wrapped about the finger may be used to wash the mouth. This must be done carefully because of the soreness. Repeat the treatment every hour or two.

The doctor will advise you about the food and prescribe appropriate treatment to build up the general health.

BOSTON'S LUCKY GIRL

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

Defense Scores a Triumph with Witnesses to Girl's Innocence

CHAPTER 45

THE OLD Colonnade sat in his chair on the witness stand, and answered, patiently, and courteously the countless questions they flung at him.

"Did you, or did you not, know that there was gossip about Mrs. Catherine Farnsworth and her husband's business associate, Gordon Moore?"

"I knew that there was gossip."

"How did you know it?"

"Have I not described the speeches of the son, Chester?"

"In your best judgment were these speeches false?"

"False, I know my were false because of my own observation as a member of the household, and the spying of the maid-servant, Marguerite. If they were true, Marguerite would have rejoiced, and it would have been known to me."

"Isn't it possible that she could have kept it from you?"

Tells of Tragedy

Cheung cast a contemptuous look at his questioner. "No! I am accustomed with the ways of maid-servants. I could not be mistaken."

They told him to tell what he knew of his master's last day.

"The lady and Mr. Moore were having tea in the library," he said. "I myself brought the tea," and exchanged greetings with Mr. Moore. It was Mr Moore's custom to join the lady and my master for tea in the evening.

"On this day Mr. Farnsworth came home very ill. I helped him upstairs to his room. He did not go into the library, as was his custom, to join his good friend Mr. Moore and his lady. Instead, he went directly to bed. He had been in a doctor and the doctor had told him that his days were numbered, he told me. I do not know the name of the white doctor who said so. No doubt the distinguished detectives can find his name.

"Mr. Farnsworth requested the maid, Marguerite, to tell her mistress that he would not join her at tea or dinner that night, and that he was not to be disturbed until morning, as he wished to sleep."

"What was the last time you saw your master alive?"

"When he came into the house, around seven o'clock."

"You did not go into his room, or worry about him later?"

"Certainly not. He asked not to be disturbed. I am accustomed to obeying his wishes."

"Did you accept the idea of his impending death—that is, did you think that he looked like a man who has not long to live?"

"No, sir. I had thought, at a more auspicious time, of recommending, perhaps, a Chinese doctor. I did not see death in his face."

That was all. They couldn't shake his testimony. The courtroom hummed. Reporters from the press table dashed out to telephones. Mary Paige pressed Cathie's hand.

"Gordon Moore!"

Cathie was afraid to look at him at first. "Now when they put Moore on the stand, don't look at him like a dying calf!" Mr. Allan had warned her.

Cathie had smiled tremulously. "Do I look at him that way?" Mr. Allan had laughed, "Oh, you know what I mean—love light in your eyes, and so on. Now remember that he is your husband's friend, and that's ALL."

"I'll be careful," Cathie had promised.

Moore on Stand

Well, she was being careful. Her eyes wandered over the courtroom. The Moores sat in a tight little group. The old uncle. The aunt, a weather-beaten brother. The blind aunt, silvery haired, dressed all in gray, her beautiful, sightless eyes gentle and sweet.

"How they must hate me. All of them," Cathie thought. "How they must wish that he'd loved that Mrs. Willoughby instead."

She stole a look at Gordon. Gordon wasn't pretending that she was nothing to him. He was showing in every answer, in everything he said, that he cared for her. Once when he spoke what Mr. Macmillan thought was an evasive answer, and the district attorney bellowed something about him trying to protect the defendant, Gordon just looked at him and said in his low, level voice, "Of course I'd protect her if I could. There's no one in the world I'd rather protect. But the girl doesn't need protection all she needs is a chance to tell her own story—she's innocent!"

And that was out of order, and there was another scene, but his what of that? Cathie glowed with inner happiness. The still, beautiful look that had always been hers when she thought of Gordon settled over her again. Love . . . yes, that was what it was . . . no mistaking it. But Jesse Allan, seeing it out of the corner of his downcast eye, didn't worry. It wouldn't do the prosecution any good if it wasn't plainly there. It was love triumphant, love harnessed, perhaps, but blazing and leaping . . . and as Gordon rose in a muscular, duty conformant,

Defense Scores

Fat men in the courtroom gaped at the calm, beautiful face of the girl in black, the girl with the look of a Madonna in her eyes, the defendant . . . which the district attorney said something about "Not a murderess, not a cold, bold female who sits in the room measuring shuffling of feet, whispers

"They're all right!"

"Why don't he lay off them?"

. . . "The girl's innocent . . . might as well let her go . . ."

In his corner at the table Mr. Allan saw it took all he could to hide his little, bright eyes that kept partly hidden under lowered eyelids. His red face perspired, his sandy thatch of hair stood on end under his restless fingers, and his bald spot shone. Plus was his day . . . his triumph.

A romantic housewife in the jury nudged the lady on the next chair. "Isn't it beautiful, his testimony?" she whispered.

Cathie heard Sidney Allan's. Their glances met, hers bright with gladness and hope, bright with love. His sly and calculating.

"Mr. Chester Farnsworth!"

The light went out of Cathie's face. They were calling Chester. She looked at Mr. Allan again. His expression had not changed.

Hostess Makes the Bridal Entertainment Succeed

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My husband and I are giving a dinner at a hotel on the evening of our first year anniversary for the bridal party. There are going to be 12 and I am at a loss to know just how to entertain them after we have finished our dinner. We are all in our early twenties.

It would be so kind if you would suggest something for us to do that would not carry much expense. We are going to have a private dining room and are not going to have any entertainment. H. O'D.

Why not plan to have a late dinner, say half after 8 o'clock and then have the dinner served leisurely. In the meantime there will be much conversation and general merriment, and it will be 11 o'clock before you know it, and then it will be time for the guests to go home. There isn't any reason why, when you are giving a dinner of this kind, you should plan for any form of entertainment after the dinner. The dinner itself can be so graciously done, especially since you are to have your own room, that this may constitute the complete evening's entertainment. It all depends on the hostess and the host if such a party "goes."

Double Dessert Silver Service

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please let me know if it is correct to eat a dessert of pears cut in half with a fork or spoon?

If a fork is used is the fruit left or must the spoon be used for the pears? PUZZLED.

With this kind of dessert I always place both a fork and spoon, a dessert spoon and a medium-sized fork, or a teaspoon and a small fork there, the fork called a "refork" or "buffet fork"). This is most convenient—as your second question suggests. With the spoon in your right hand you can cut the pear and enjoy the delicious juice, and with the fork in your left hand you can have an aid to help the spoon. You will see this silver service with increasing frequency. If you watch, both in homes and in restaurants.

Mrs. Beeckmap will be glad to answer questions of etiquette submitted by readers.

Many Millions Have Vanished in Depression

Multi-Millionaires, Their Fortunes Cut in Two, Now Feel Poor

— By B. C. FORBES —

New York, Oct. 16—This letter is typical of many coming to this column:

"May I ask what happened to all the money that certainly had before this present depression? Has it evaporated into the ether, gone abroad, or been buried somewhere? Is there less money in the country than there was in September of 1929? Your comment will be deeply appreciated."

B. C. Forbes

While there is no justification for the recent ruinous slumps in the stock and commodity markets, and elsewhere, it cannot be denied that many people are worth much less money than they were a year ago.

1—Securities alone have depreciated in market value by about $40,000,000,000.

2—Our wheat, corn, cotton and other farm crops are worth several billions less.

3—Many individual owners of business concerns who could have sold out last year at a very rich figure could not dispose of their business today at by far so much.

4—The income of many people has diminished.

5—The market value of real estate has in most parts of the country declined drastically from the boom levels.

6—The nation's total payroll may become distinctly thinner owing to the spread of unemployment since last year.

Perhaps a few actual instances of what has happened to certain wealthy individuals may throw some insight into what virtually is gripped many men of large means.

One man who owns a large block of stock in the corporation he heads saw the stock worth according to the market value of fully $60,000,000 last year. At this week's quotations, the same stock is worth less than $10,000,000. His other possessions have likewise shrunk up in quotations.

Another friend who figured his wealth and year at more than $7,000,000 couldn't sell out today to half that amount. He enlarged his expenditures when he thought he was among the rich, as he pertained me. I pass just now.

A well-known banker told me the other day that he still believes he has stopped losses for him which is that truck competition is a serious factor in cutting into railroad earnings.

President Harrison looks forward on Federal regulation of the trucks. Undoubtedly this will meet with strong opposition, both from truck owners and from their legion of patrons. President Gaspar G. Bacon of the Massachusetts Senate, this week re-elected a director of Southern Railway, has previously expressed himself as opposed to the tendency for an excess of Federal government interference.

Promotion of Edward F. Gerish of Boston, formerly in charge of the commercial survey of the Gulf Southwest, to chief of the newly created domestic regional division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, is announced by Julius D. Cohen, director of the bureau.

Formation of a graphic background for business through accurate and timely statistics and other means will be the function of the Commerce Department's new division. Among the chief duties of the new division will be to furnish for the country as a whole and for specific regions, economic data on which intelligent sales effort in a given territory depends.

* * *

Mr. Gerish was graduated from Harvard College in 1915 and the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration in 1918. He has had a wide and varied business experience prior to his joining the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce four years ago. He was with the import department of a large New York firm and was later with the export department of a Boston company.

* * *

Mr. Gerish has had a wide experience in sales and sales promotion work. He has been connected with a national chemical company in that capacity, later on was associated with the sales promotion department of a large soap company. He is the author of "Retailer and Consumer Markets" and "Industrial Structure of New England." A Market Data Handbook of New England" and numerous articles in scientific and trade journals.

Limit Is Set on Trading in Cotton

New York Oct 16—The board of managers of the New York Cotton Exchange has set max mum limit of interest by any member firm or corporation and affiliations at 1,000,000 bales for delivery in October, 1930, and in all months to and including September, 1931.

CORPORATIONS WITH BILLION NUMBER 24

By FRANK H. MELOON

A study of American business organization reveals the interesting fact that an even two dozen are now entitled to membership in the "Billion Dollar Club." There are just 24 with assets of a billion or more. The Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. whose assets are more than $3,000,000,000, is the largest of the billionaires. Chase National Bank of New York comes next, and American Telephone is third.

* * *

Senate action regarding the senility of the bearish element in the stock market is clearly indicated by recent events. The conference at the White House is variously interpreted in Wall and State Streets, but there is little doubt that the bears will come in for injury when the Glass investigating committee of the Senate resumes sessions in the middle of November.

Particular interest is expected to attach to the inquiry into the bear campaign against Fox Film. The practice of "pulling" stocks is at hand in the situation if even a small percentage of the rumors in financial circles as to that the bears did in connection with this issue can be proven in the courts.

In line with previous studies reported in this column, President John J. Pelley of the New Haven estimates that the line will cover in 1930 upwards of $60,000,000. Heavy gross. Perhaps more important to the statement that the current expenditures on the property will be substantially reduced in 1931.

* * *

Net earnings are expected to fall off. He is the first president to admit frankly what we have frequently pointed out here, which is that truck competition is a serious factor in cutting into railroad earnings.

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

Boston houses, fortified with the investment position of the country, grasp drop in common stock prices forecast a change in the financial methods of the future. Some of them think that in the next few years the trend will be toward bond issues, as it was prior to 1928.

* * *

They predict this on the theory that increases in capital accounts are saddled corporations with permanent charges that constitute a difficulty in covering during periods of depression. In their opinion, a great deal of money raised through capital increases was not needed and is now proving to be a burden.

In contrast to this system those investment houses say short or long-term bond issues are more mobile as they can be paid off as the projects for which they were issued are placed on a firm earning basis.

Because some common stock investors may be enlisted into the ranks of the preferred stock market if additional bond charges are deducted before common stock earnings are shown, there is expected a greater intrinsic worth of the junior securities when the senior obligations have been reduced, in contrast this with greater deflated prices because of insufficient earnings on invested capital account.

There are many who believe that bank stocks to be thoroughly liquidated. Buying of bank stocks appeared on the last dip according to one broker who expects a great deal more interest to develop on any secondary reaction.

Present Time Called Right for Recovery

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

New York, Oct. 16—Now that business and finance have taken the bitter medicine of deflation, the time has come to organize a co-ordinated campaign for recovery and the relief of unemployment.

Before deflation was completed last November, President Hoover summoned the heads of the railroads, public utilities, bankers, industrial and labor leaders. He then acted when the snowball had just begun to run down hill, and when the growing momentum which could not be stopped. Accordingly, the depression has run its course, and business and the stock market currently are lower than it was in the autumn of 1929.

M. S. Rukeyser

Mr. Hoover, in listing the constructive results of his conference pointed out:

"The business community, the bankers, labor and the government have co-operated in wider spread measures of mitigation than have ever been attempted before. Our bankers and the reserve system have carried the country through the credit storm without impairment. Our leading business concerns have sustained wages, have distributed employment, have expedited heavy construction. The government has expanded public work, assisted in credit to agriculture, and has resisted disruptive legislation. These measures have maintained a higher degree of consumption than would have otherwise been the case. They have thus prevented a large increase of unemployment. They have provided much new employment. Our present unemployment relief should form the basis of even more amplified plans in the future."

Is not this a time, with business at or near the bottom of depression and with the end of further sharp declines therefore minimized—for another co-ordinated drive in the form of co-operation between government, finance and labor to replenish consumption? Is not this a time for the application of the principle that in all human affairs the best defense is a good offense?

Dr. H. Schacht, former head of the Reichsbank, has come to this country to urge economic leaders to stop the policy of drifting and through intelligent organization among private business men to set in motion necessary projects in industrial expansion which will absorb the excess capacity in the durable goods industries.

Co-ordinated leadership of business must be continuous through all the months ahead. Only in that way can the Sporadic incidents cannot achieve the potential benefits of the new method.

Now is the time for a resumption of co-ordinated efforts, guided by socially minded leaders. Commodity prices are deflated—demand less too much so. Staple products are selling at or below the cost of production. Copper, for example is down to the lowest price level since 1896.

The speculative mania has been long since broken, and funds have flowed back to normal channels, restoring an equilibrium in the money markets. Brokers' loans are down 55 per cent from the peak standing at the newest level since July 20, 1927. They have fallen 28 per cent from the peak level of 1930. As recent low levels the average price of industrial stocks, according to the Standard Sta listics Co., is 135.6 compared with the panic low of 141.3 on November 13 last, and the railroad index reached 108.3, compared with 117.7 on November 13 last. The average price of railroad stocks is at the lowest ebb since January, 1927, and industrials are at the lowest level since November, 1927. Public utility shares are quoted substantially above the 1929 low of 156.3.

Moreover, in addition to the deflation of equity and commodity prices industrial production has been drastically curtailed. While consumption has gone on, resulting in the using up of accumulated stocks and the piling up of potential shortages when pent up demand is released. Furthermore consumers have been wearing out their large investment of goods in automobiles, bonds bought on the instalment plan.

The public will release purchasing power for postponable intermediate outlays, such as for automobiles and new housing when it is assured that the economic outlook is definitely better. It is therefore the duty of leadership to clear the air of rumors, doubts, and unreasoning skepticism. An opportunity exists for a co-ordinated campaign to initiate remedial measures, constructive projects and the factual basis for a new and more cheerful popular psychology. The economic sores are healing, and the basis exists for a recovery.

Col. Leonard P. Ayres, southern of the Cleveland Trust Company who last summer predicted (correctly) that business would not turn has now expanded that the fall improvement has not been normal in character. "Nevertheless," he says, "it is encouraging to note that business activity is not continuing to decline. It is moving sideways at a low level, but is not getting worse."

Col. Ayres believes that it is prudent to re-establish lines of stock for resale for long term holding when

NEW YORK STOCKS

Today's Complete Prices and Dividends

WALL STREET CHANGES IN PRICES MOSTLY NARROW

New York, Oct. 16—Share prices drifted narrowly in extremely dull trading in today's stock market, as profits were taken on stock bought at last week's new low levels, buying orders were limited and bears were cautious.

Closing quotations were slightly above the day's lowest in most issues. U. S. Steel closed off about 2 points, having been depressed nearly 3.

GILLETTE IS HIGHER.

Other shares closing around 2 to 3 points lower included American Can, American Telephone, Public Service of New Jersey, American Water Works, General Electric and New York Central. Westinghouse and Eastman lost about 4 points.

Gillette, however, shot up 7 and closed with a net gain of 5.

Warner Bros. gained 3 and Consolidated Film around 2 points.

The closing tone was heavy. Total sales aggregated 1,750,000 shares.

Selling against General Motors for a time during the morning was a little unsettling, but extensive selling caused a decline of only 1¼ points, and the stock then recovered somewhat.

It was said in brokerage circles that the selling merely represented the liquidation of a large speculative account. Most of the day's selling was regarded as profit-taking on stock bought at last week's lower levels.

Strength of Gillette reflected announcement of the completion of the plan to acquire Autostrop. The announcement indicated that after the merger is completed Gillette will be placed on a $4 annual dividend basis, as reduced from $5, but Wall Street had expected a reduction in the dividend, and brokerage gossip had indicated that the reduction might be larger.

FILM MOVES UP.

Consolidated Film moved upward on announcement of the closing of a five-year contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the processing of more than 500,000,000 feet of film.

The rally in Warner Bros. was attributed to reports in trade circles that current operations were again showing fair profits, after the unfavorable results of the summer. The advance in this issue, however, lacked vigor, for traders are awaiting with interest the annual report covering the fiscal year ended Aug. 31.

While business news has not been as bad this week as had been expected, the recession has indicated, commission houses were inclined to advise customers to move cautiously. Some analysts by statistical advisory services this week have echoed that sound recovery cannot be hurried.

F. W. Dodge Corp.'s report of building contracts let in the Rocky Mountain district for the first 10 days of the month was one of the brightest items in the day's news, showing a sharp reversal of the trend of a year ago.

The daily average of contracts let was nearly 19 per cent above September, but 11¼ per cent under a year ago. Production of electricity for the week ended Oct. 11 was reported as ½ of 1 per cent above the preceding week and 1½ under the like period of 1929.

Call money was a little more plentiful. Although the official rate was maintained at 2 per cent, offerings were made in the outside market at 1¾.

RAILS ARE DULL.

Rails were dull. A block of 23,400 shares of Canadian Pacific, new, sold at 43½ after which the stock moved up fractionally.

Changes in the bond market were a mixture of small gains and loses today as buyers adopted a cautious attitude towards new investments.

Price improvement continued in the foreign list, which experienced a brisk rally yesterday, but it was of a more mild nature today. The domestic section was fairly steady, and buying was of a high selective character, centering principally in railroad issues.

Meeting the demand for short term investments, the Edison Electric Illuminating Co. of Boston $30,000,000 3-year 5½ debentures today by this morning. A refinancing measure, the note issue constitutes the principal piece of new financing.

A large utility issue expected to be offered soon will raise $14,000,000 for the Northern Indiana Public Service Co.

WRIGLEY HAS EARNINGS UP

Chicago, Oct. 16—National gum consumption continues to increase.

Report of William Wrigley, Jr., for quarter ended Sept. 30, 1930, and for nine months ended Sept. 30, 1930, before depreciation, Federal taxes, etc., equivalent to $1.69 a share on 2,000,000 shares of no par stock.

This compares with $3,314,455 or $1.50 a share, on 1,999,974 shares in preceding quarter and $3,422,923, or $1.68 a share on 1,972,462 shares, in third quarter of preceding year.

Net profit for first nine months of 1930 totaled $9,053,046 after above charges, equal to $4.52 a share on 2,000,000 shares, comparing with $8,534,912 or $4.33 a share on 1,972,462 shares in first nine months of 1929.

Pierce Petroleum Initial Ordered

Pierce Petroleum Corp. declared initial dividend of 10 cents on the common, payable Nov. 15 to stock of record Nov. 1. Earlier this year the company sold its properties to Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corp. receiving in exchange Sinclair common stock which constitutes its only asset.

CURIOUS CREATURES

"PUT ON THE SPOT"

at arm's length—yet it took all his steel will-power to keep him from taking her, willing or no. Goldie did not want her by force or mere convenience. He wanted his wild love returned, and in every way he sought to inspire in her some interest in himself beyond gratitude.

Of course, men had taken Polack Annie before. Like Topsy, she "growed" that way before she had met the Edgewater Kid. Her passion for him had colored her whole life. It had awakened in her a loathing for all other men—when before she had accepted their attentions with indifference. It had made a woman of her.

The Edgewater Kid had become a sanctified memory to her now. Thoughts of him had formed a shrine in her heart and she no longer was a lonely woman. With the hallowed love and every material wish granted, Polack Annie was not unhappy. She peacefully ran the country seothed her grief. The lavish attentions which Goldie showered upon her eased her pain.

She did begin to think of Goldie in a favorable light. She felt for him like a father to the Edgewater kid. He was like a big-brother to her. He did not pester her like other men had done. And she respected him for it.

Long Walks

They had long walks together, and Goldie would always terminate them by some sentimental speech for her benefit. He would press her hand consolingly or pat her cheek—but there seemed no sinister significance to these gestures. Sometimes she thought he did look strangely at her, but he offset that by his other actions. Polack Annie began to feel that she owed Goldie much for his kind attentions.

So, when she learned that the Kissing King was planning to start trouble over the death of their leader, she told Goldie one night:

"Goldie," she began seriously, "there ain't no use of your gang takin' the rap for the killin' of Kinky King.

"Why no?" asked Goldie, surprised.

"I killed that hog," she answered, looking out through the French window into the purple twilight.

Goldie waited for her to continue. When she said nothing more, he caught her hand and intoned softly:

"I know it, Banes, I know it because it was pulled with the gold automatic I gave the Edgewater Kid for knockin' off Lefty Pete. And, Babes, that makes no reason why I wasn't goin' to take no chances of 'em nailin' that rap on you—why I stuck up central an' took you away. I was afraid they might make it stick—fingerprints or somethin—or third degree you an' break you—though I knew they pinched you to give the 'papers somethin' to talk about."

"I killed him," dreamily continued Polack Annie, "because he killed the only man I ever loved. I knew he was goin' to escape that night the Kid took me to the Devil's Hall. I saw it in his eyes that night. I knew that drunken devil. When he saw us, the Kid was on the spot."

She began to weep softly. Goldie patted her hand.

"There, there, Babes, don't cry," he urged softly.

"I knocked him off with a smile," exclaimed Polack Annie, straightening up, her tear-starred eyes sparkling. "He took the only way I ever loved. When I left him for the Kid I still had a key to his flat. I knew just when to go there—just when the swine would be good and soused. An' before I let him have it I sobered him up—sober enough to know why. He was beggin', prayin'—then I plugged him!"

Body Quivered

Her slender body was quivering. Goldie put his arm around her shoulders gently, and her red-crested head fell on his chest. But she straightened almost instantly.

"There ain't no use of you and the mob talkin' that rap, Goldie," she said softly. "I done that job. I don't care what happens to me. Let 'em burn me up, Goldie—or let Gleason and his mob take me for a ride—I done it. You been too kind to me—to me an' the Kid—for me to let you get this fall."

"Now, listen, Babes," Goldie began sternly. "What's been done's done. You ain't walkin' into no rap —see? The Kid was like a son to me——"

He paused and pressed her to him.

"——and Babes, I love you!" She tore herself loose, fiercely.

"You—what?" she shrilled.

"I love you—like—a daughter!" "Oh-h-h!"

BOSTON HOTELS ENJOYING BOOM

A hotel boom is being experienced in Boston.

The Brunswick, Ritz Carlton, Parker House and Westminster reported yesterday that all rooms were filled, while the Copley-Plaza, second largest hotel in the city, had but few rooms available for incoming guests.

The crowded hotel situation, coming a week after the American Legion convention, was said to several reasons yesterday by veteran hotel men. One is that hundreds of travelers postponed Boston visits until after the Legion meet.

Another is the American Federation of Labor convention and the week-end football games which have caused many to book rooms days in advance. Still another reason, as seen by the hotel men, was yesterday's inclement weather. Few hotel guests, unless business required it, wish to "paddle out" on rainy days.

With several hotels reporting all their rooms full yesterday, managers of the larger houses were forced to send inquirers to other hotels, whose managers had advised of accommodations available.

FINANCE HEAD IN CHINA QUITS

Shanghai, Oct. 16 (US)—T. V. Soong, minister of finance in the cabinet of President Chiang Kai-Shek, yesterday threw a bombshell into Nanking political circles by submitting his resignation to the state council.

Soong's resignation is understood to be an astute political move made at the president's instigation in an effort to oust the more radical element from the Kuomintang, preparatory to the adoption of a more conciliatory policy designed to win foreign confidence and rehabilitate foreign credit now that the civil war is over.

The finance minister's resignation was accompanied by an ultimatum to all other government departments demanding the most stringent economies. Those are necessary, he pointed out, in order to defray the expenses of the seven months' warfare and to avoid a further drain on silver, if the government does not wish to default its bonded indebtedness.

The state council is considering the resignation, but is expected to meet in session on November 12, when it is also expected to offer a comprehensive budget scheme.

Fair Food Prices Sought for Jobless

Chicago, Oct. 16 (AP)—Formation of a bureau to secure fair prices on food was among plans outlined today by Dr. Benjamin L. Squires, State labor adviser, in connection with Illinois' efforts to relieve its unemployment situation. Dr. Squires is chairman of a committee of industrialists, bankers and labor leaders, appointed by Governor Emmerson.

Rather Harsh Words

Hundreds of Fine American Women Against Prohibition

Amos W. W. Woodcock, Chief of Prohibition Enforcement, writing a little article on "The Value of Law Observance," says this:

"Opposition to laws restraining gambling, prostitution, insanitary conditions and the use of liquor is usually from the same source."

That is what might be called "slightly intemperate language."

Hundreds of American women, among the most respectable and respected, in the United States, are opposed to Prohibition, because, after trial, they believe that it leads to drunkenness and crime, and demoralizes children.

The names of these women could not properly be printed in juxtaposition to the above observation by the Prohibition Chief.

The women that openly condemn and oppose Prohibition include a daughter-in-law of the late Theodore Roosevelt, and many other women of highest character engaged in education, philanthropy and public service.

Neither these women, nor any of the thoroughly respectable men that oppose Prohibition, belong to the class that "oppose laws restraining gambling, prostitution, and insanitary conditions."

Certain sincere Prohibitionists resent the words "fanaticism" and "fanatics" when applied to their theories and themselves.

But they will hardly deny that a man is a fanatic who misrepresents as allies of gambling, prostitution and insanitary conditions all those that oppose his particular views on the regulation of alcohol.

Fanaticism like alcohol makes men blind, stupifies them, and ultimately destroys them.

Let's Have Them

Professor Thomas N. Carver of Harvard and a distinguished group of Massachusetts citizens who advocate prohibition have challenged its opponents to a series of public debates. The question at issue would be whether the State Volstead act should be sustained or repealed by the voters in the impending election. The debates would be held in the large centers of population such as Boston, Worcester, Springfield, Fall River, Lawrence and Lowell.

By all means this challenge should be accepted. It comes from a responsible group of people. It should be enlightening and informing.

Above all, it would get us back to the first principles of democracy—those of free speech and public assembly. The public debate was good enough for Samuel Adams and it was good enough for Abraham Lincoln. That it has fallen into disuse of late years is a sad testimonial to the incompetency and cowardice of politicians.

No Whipping Post

Not in This Day and Age

The late Archie Butt, whose interesting letters from the White House are being published in the Hearst newspapers, wrote of George W. Wickersham, "He has as much political judgment as an ox." Wickersham verifies Butt's estimate of him by proposing that we now give serious thought to the revival of the whipping post, where offenders might be flogged in the presence of the gaping, curious mob.

Let the whipping post be set up in Dock Square, near to Faneuil Hall, where brutal tyranny was resisted. Let the first victim be some hapless fellow who, in a moment of exuberance, has taken one drink of gin too many. Let Mr. Wickersham be invited over from Washington or New York to apply the cat-o'-nine-tail to the poor fellow's back. If the plan is worthy of consideration, surely its author could be expected to accept the honor of being the first to put it into effect.

The Cadets Are Coming

See Them Parade Saturday

The West Point cadets will be reviewed on Boston Common Saturday morning by Mayor Curley and military officials. We advise all who are interested in military precision and the sight of sturdy American youth to witness this spectacle. The West Point cadets have the reputation of being the finest marching body in the world. Of course, these boys may have no army to command in future years if America's defenses continue to be dissipated to the size of a corporal's guard. But their marching will interest you.

OUR NEW NAVY YARD

The ships that we'll discard,
And they'll be rusting slowly in
Our strange new navy yard.

That once was Davy Jones'.

Listen, World! - A Question

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Does Motherhood Pay?

DOES MOTHERHOOD pay? Clara doubted it. She frankly confessed that she preferred her freedom, her figure and her fun with her job and her husband. She said that thousands of other modern young women felt as she did—and we knew that was true. So we published her letter and waited results. They came! Never before in the history of this department have so many letters been received on any one subject. Hundreds and hundreds have poured in, praising Clara or condemning her. Here are two. They will interest every woman who reads them. Read them and answer this: Which of these women is getting the most out of life?

Elsie Robinson

Dear Miss Robinson

My husband and I feel able to answer Clara's letter out of actual experience. We had children, but we lost them and we are able to judge which condition is better for people in moderate circumstances.

We are very devoted and enjoy life together immensely. I was 19 when our baby boy was born, and Jack was 24. Two years later our daughter was born, but lived only a few months. The boy died at 4.

During those four years my husband's salary was only $35 a week so of course I had no help. I drudged all day and at night I was so tired I could not even talk or listen to my husband. He put the children to bed, read his paper and then we retired at 9:30. That was our whole program.

What companionship could we give each other? None. We were worried, shabby, tired—couldn't afford any amusements—looked like old people. When they both died we grieved terribly but now we see it was for the best. For now I have a good office position. My husband is studying law and I am studying accounting. We have a car and a radio. We are actually thanking God today for taking our babies as we certainly couldn't give them the square deal they deserved.

DORIS.

There's one woman's choice. Here's another's—

DEAR MISS ROBINSON:

I'm snatching this minute from my work to tell Clara what I think of her. I am 42 years of age, have been married 24 years and have 12 husky youngsters. My husband is 46 and I certainly haven't sacrificed his love by being a mother.

He is a machinist. He has never been able to make more than $6 per day but we have done pretty well. We own our own 11-room house, have a piano, phonograph, radio and violin, as we are all very musical. We entertain and go out a lot and have fine friends. Best of all, the children are turning out great.

Of course they were a big job, but the youngest have been taught to wait on themselves and the house so arranged that they could. The boys make up beds, sweep, dust and wash dishes as well as the girls. There are still eight in the grades and two babies at home, so things are pretty lively. But we make them feel it is their home as much as ours and they can invite anyone they want, if they'll just ask permission in advance.

What more could life give me than a family like that. I'd like to know? I tackled it all with a glad heart and so I've kept my youth and strength—and my husband doesn't complain about my looks. As for fun, we all have it together. I am proud of my job. Miss Robinson. I am glad God chose me to bear some of his burden and I will do the very best I know how. I wouldn't give two cents for a life of leisure. What would it mean?

MRS. THOMAS HALFORD.

"Freedom, figure and fun" or . . . that! Which would you choose?

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

Mystery House at 39th Street

NEW YORK, Oct. 16—That eerie "Mystery House" at 39th at. and 5th ave. is in the last lap of its historic stand against progress all around it. For it has struck a jarring note in the architectural ensemble. On tax records it is the Wendel mansion, down-at-the-heel four-storied structure of the early 50's.

Adjoining it northward is the $5,000,000 vacant yard with its plain high board fence, used for years as a playground for a toothless and asthmatic poodle. The sole occupant of the house today is Miss Ella Wendel, survivor of the family that founded its fortune with Jacob Astor in the fur trade.

The recent passing of the eldest Wendel sister, a lady of 87, leaves the remaining sister with a fortune of $200,000,000. The bleak mansion has 22 rooms, only three, however, are said to be used by the owner and two venerable servants. About the place hangs the musty suggestion of a crypt.

The windows are mostly curtainless, dilapidated shutters flap in the winds, and the only illumination is from one or two flickering blobs from wall gas jets. It has the same cloying atmosphere so frequently used by fictionists for the locale of shuddery stories. It is the theme of an English mystery story.

Strangers to New York who ride in sight-seeing buses have the gloomy pile pointed out while the megaphonist shouts: "Shh-h-h-h! We pass Manhattan's Mystery Mansion! No one ever goes in. No one ever comes out. Two old ladies just sit and rock in the dark!"

* * *

The ballyhoo is, of course, an exaggeration. The Wendel sisters have always been alert, cultured women who simply have no interest in modernity. Each preferred to live in the past. Their father's business maxim was to buy real estate but never sell. The children were loyal to the trust.

The Fifth ave. house and lot are said to represent an original investment in excess of $100,000. The lot alone is now worth many millions so the Wendel vision was not myopic. When the house comes down, the last touch of Victorianism on the avenue goes the way of the puff sleeve. And it's about time.

The backgammon craze lingers. In its infancy 25 years ago it was later obscured by such rowdy parlor games as parchesi and crokinole. But one aristocratic club has had a backgammon room for years.

Backgammon is derived from the Saxon bac, bach, and gamone, game, a game in which the player is set back. Chaucer loved it. An especially designed board and dice are used.

* * *

Miss Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army lives aloofly in a Swiss-like chalet with two secretaries and two dogs at Hartsdale on the Hudson. Neighbors see her only on her morning gallop. The rest of her time she is at her office in town, where she works until late.

They say Howard Thurston, the magician, is constantly manipulating a coin in his hands as he walks or sits in a cafe or theater, to keep muscles in perfect trim.

Recently Elwood, the magician, wrote in he had given up trouping. For years he toured tank towns with his hypnotic-magical exhibitions. But this form of entertainment no longer attracts. And those of us who remember Prof. Boone's hair-raising lickety-split blind-folded drive down Main street for the hidden key heave a wistful sigh.

Prof Boone appeared resplendent in Prince Albert coat and hight hat of gold cloth and had "piercing cat-green eyes"—so the ad said. I remember interviewing him for our little four-page local daily. But I never looked him in the eye. He wasn't going to trick me and have me running around town flapping my arms and crowing like a rooster. No, sir!

* * *

The professor put a subject in a hypnotic trance and left him in a tailor's window to be awakened at the final Saturday night performance. I was one of the goggle-eyed hoots, chalk white, and wearing a blue stock, who helped carry him on a cot from the window to the stage.

I suppose people today would laugh at such silly fears, ho, ho! But permit me, Mesdames et Messieures, I'm still afraid to look a hypnotist in the eye. And a giraffe's ears to you, loud mouthed chucklers.

Speakeasies at Washington

More and Worse Than the Old Saloons

WHERE YOU CAN BUY LIQUOR IN THE NATION'S CAPITAL

This map of the nation's capital, showing the number of places where you can buy liquor, interests everybody.

Making due allowance for the growth of Washington since 1920, it shows a vastly greater number of "saloons" AFTER prohibition than BEFORE prohibition.

The old-fashioned saloon has gone, never to return, and the American people are glad of it.

The new-fashioned saloon, infinitely more numerous and infinitely worse, is here, and rational Americans are NOT glad of it.

Indeed, most rational Americans would rather have the old saloon with its evils than the new saloon, which has the old evils and a lot more.

The old did not sell poison disguised as beer, wine or whiskey. The new does.

The old paid part of its earnings to the Government in the form of licenses or taxes. The new pays nothing to the Government, but much to gangsters and gunmen, police and prohibition officers in the form of blackmail.

This map of Washington is also a map of EVERY American city, the only difference being the names of the streets.

It is, therefore, not particularly significant in itself. It merely illustrates average conditions throughout the country.

It IS significant, perhaps, as showing the powerlessness of the Federal Government to enforce its own mandates in its own home town.

The Government, months ago, appointed a hardboiled cavalry general to clean out the speakeasies, as an example to the nation of what it could do if in earnest about it.

This map shows what it can do and has done.

If the Federal Government cannot clean its own nest, citizens naturally ask what chance it has of cleaning up other cities, most of which refuse point blank to co-operate in the process.

This map answers that question, as well, and answers it conclusively.
